McSwain Is Dead; Stricken on Train En Route to Home

Head of House Military Unit Succumbs at Columbia, S. C.

Served as Captain During World War

Legislator Led Inquiry of War Department Sales Scandal.

By the Associated Press.

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 6.—Representative John J. McSwain, 61 (Democrat), South Carolina, of Greenville, died today at the Veterans Hospital here of a heart attack.

Dr. O. E. Herndon, chief medical officer of the hospital, said the legislator was admitted to the hospital at 1 p. m. after being stricken on a train en route to his home from Fort Moultrie, where he had been spending some time with the 263d Coast Artillery Regiment of the South Carolina National Guard of which he was an honorary colonel. He died at 3:15.

Representative McSwain, who was chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, had long been suffering from a heart ailment, and five years ago was treated at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington.

Early this summer he announced that he would not run for re-election, explaining that his physician had warned him against the strain of another campaign.

The body of McSwain was sent tonight to his Greenville, S. C., home where funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon.

Served in World War.

Representative John Jackson McSwain was one of a group of veteran House members from the South who became committee chairmen when the Democrats captured the House in 1932. The post to which he was elevated, chairman of Military Affairs Committee, had been a relatively unimportant one in peace time. During McSwain's four-year incumbency, however, it was almost continuously in the spotlight.

McSwain, himself a captain in France during the World War, took an intense interest in the Army, and did most of his traveling by airplane in order to see the forts and stations in various parts of the country. On one occasion he was injured when his plane hit an air pocket 2,000 feet above the ground.

A stanch advocate of a strong national defense, McSwain, through the last session a Bill to raise the enlisted personnel of the Army from 118,000 to 165,000, and an increase of the officer strength from 12,000 to 14,000. He also sponsored legislation for an enlargement of the Air Corps.

The South Carolinian was a critic of the Army Air Corps' practice of purchasing airplanes by negotiated contracts when Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois was chief of the corps. Plane purchases now are made through competitive bidding.

Under McSwain's chairmanship the House Military Affairs Committee conducted an investigation of irregularities in War Department purchases and sales that led to the court-martial of two high-ranking Army officers.

Heart in Bad Condition.

McSwain had been suffering from a weak heart for some time, a fact well known to his colleagues in the House. They were afraid last March that he might collapse and tried to prevent his making a dramatic speech from the floor.

Among the telegrams seized by the Black Lobby Committee of the Senate was one which Publisher William Randolph Hearst sent to his chief editorial writer in Washington, James T. Williams, jr. The telegram concerned McSwain and the committee gave him a copy of it.

Choking with emotion, the white-haired, sofe-voiced South Carolinian arose to a point of personal privilege and insisted on reading the Hearst message. It said:

"Confidential. Why not make several editorials calling for the impeachment of Mr. McSwain. He is the enemy within the gates of Congress, the Nation's citadel. He is a Communist in spirit and a traitor in effect. He would leave the United States naked to its foreign and domestic enemies. Please make these editorials for morning papers."

Denouncing Hearst as "the fiend of San Simeon," McSwain told how he had found it necessary to hide Hearst papers from members of his family.

"God save the mark!" he cried.

Demotions End 'Jealous' Clash Of U.S. Officers

Two Secret Service Men Set Down After Inquiry Into F.B.I. Operative.

By Robert C. Albright.

A "jealous" clash between operatives of two crack undercover agencies of the Government—the United States Secret Service and the Federal Bureau of Investigation—was closed yesterday with demotion of two agents of the one for unauthorized investigation of the other.

Disciplinary action was taken by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau against Joseph E. Murphy, assistant chief of the Secret Service, and Grady Boatwright, chief of the St. Paul Secret Service bureau. Murphy, wartime chief of the White House guard, was relieved of his assistant command and given an unnamed assignment. Boatwright was sent into the field.

A story rivaling the best detective fiction, of Boatwright's investigation of the killing of Eddie Green, gunman, bank robber and member of both the Dillinger and Karpis-Barker gangs, lay behind the Secretary's action. Boatwright was said to have acted under authority from Murphy, but exceeded his "instructions."

One version was that talk of ultimate merger of mainfold Government undercover units, with the Justice Department's Federal Bureau of Investigation on the top of the heap, prompted the intradepartmental spying.

Morgenthau wrote a formal letter of apology to Attorney General Cummings, who had expressed indignation over what he called an "ill-advised" incident. Previously, the two Cabinet officers had held informal conferences over the last two days.

Cummings, who had told reporters that anyone "shooting at Hoover" (J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation) had "better start shooting at me," indicated he was entirely appeased by Morgenthau's action.

"I deeply appreciate Secretary Morgenthau's fine letter," the Attorney General said. "The admin-

Lovelock Sets 1,500 Mark At Olympics

New Zealand Trackman Withstands Challenge of Cunningham.

Record Set in 1932 Is Broken by 5 Runners in Berlin Race.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

Berlin, Aug. 6.—Gliding flawlessly to a world record triumph at a speed which, if sustained, would have approximated a 4:03 mile, New Zealand's John Edward Lovelock raced off with the classic Olympic 1,500-meter championship like a feather in a breeze today.

The curly-haired, supremely confident little medical student staggered the world's foremost milers by uncorking a final 300-meter sprint, standing off the lion-hearted challenge of the great Glenn Cunningham and clipping a full second off Bill Bonthron's world record time of 3:48.8.

Cunningham Is No Match.

Cunningham ran the greatest race of his career, himself under the listed world record as he was clocked in 3:48.4, but there was no runner in the world who could match nimble Jack this afternoon, including Luigi Beccali, Italy's defending champion, and Archie San Romani, America's "dark horse," who ran third and fourth.

Lovelock's dazzling triumph in the race which saw five foot racers finish under Beggali's former Olympic mark of 3:51.2 thrilled an overflow crowd of 105,000, including Chancellor Hitler, and climaxed the most spectacular day thus far of the eleventh Olympiad which fast is wiping out the majority of previous Olympic standards.

America's hurdling sweep was completed by the incomparable Forrest (Spec) Towns, of Augusta, Ga., who flashed over the high timber, equalling his own new world mark of 14.1 seconds in the semifinals and then outfooting Great Britain's Don Finlay and Fritz Pollard, jr., Chicago Negro, in a 14.2 seconds final.

No records were beaten in the javelin final, but Germany's handsome blond Bernhardt Stoeck broke the Scandinavian monopoly for the first time in Olympic history, beating Finnish favorites, including the world-record holder, Matti Jarvinen, who was handicapped by a lame back and wound up fifth in defense of his crown won at Los Angeles four years ago. Stoeck's winning toss measured 71.84 meters, 235 feet 8 13-32 inches.

Eleven New Olympic Marks.

The brightest and warmest day since the competition began was finished spectacularly by Japan's Naoto Tajima, who hopped, skipped and jumped to a new world record of 16 meters, 82 feet 5 15-16 inches, in the triple jump. The sons of Nippon finished one-two, capturing their specialty for the third straight Olympiad and whipping another world-record holder, Jack Metcalfe, of Australia, at his own game. Metcalfe placed third as Roland Romero, of Welsh, La., was a good fifth.

The lone women's final, the 80-meter hurdles, marked Italy's first triumph, Trebisonda Valla getting the verdict by inches after a photo-finish in which four girls were so closely bunched in the week's most exciting feminine event that all were timed in 11.7 seconds—one-tenth of a second slower than the new Olympic mark the Italian champion set yesterday.

With the blue ribbon Olympic program entering the final three days tomorrow, all attendance records not only have been shattered, but new Olympic marks have been set up in 11 of 16 men's track and field events completed.

World records have been achieved in four events and equaled in one other during the spree, overshadow-

Plane Crash, Killing Eight, Spurs Inquiry

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Aug. 6.—In its battered instruments and retracted landing gear, investigators sought today the cause of the crash which last night killed all eight persons aboard Chicago & Southern's airliner, The City of Memphis.

Why Pilot Carl Zier turned and started back for Lambert-St. Louis Municipal Airport, within a few minutes after he had taken off for Chicago, was a mystery the investigators hoped to pierce.

Declining to speculate, Bureau of Air Commerce inspectors studied the wreckage and considered the stories of several witnesses. From Pilot James Benedict, who brought the plane into St. Louis from New Orleans, they learned it was in perfect mechanical order when he landed.

Inquest Today.

The first results of the investigation may be given tomorrow when St. Louis County Coroner Luke B. Tiernon conducts an inquest into the deaths of Zier, his co-pilot, Russell C. Mossman, and the six passengers.

They were:

Vernon C. Omlie, widely known airman and husband of Mrs. Phoebe Omlie, former racing pilot and now a Bureau of Air Commerce official.

W. S. Bartlett, Chicago, associated with the Great Lakes Coal & Coke Co.

B. R. McDavitt, Chicago, a commercial artist.

C. B. Wright, Hinsdale, Ill., western representative of the Lake Tankers Corporation of New York.

Three-Hour Search.

For three hours, beginning when an alarmed farmer reported hearing its motors suddenly go dead, ground crews of the air line searched feverishly for the plane. They discovered it, a scattered, tangled mass of wreckage, early today on a farm four miles north of the airport.

All of the victims except one had been thrown from their seats into the plowed field. Apparently all were killed instantly.

The plane took off at 9:56 p. m. on the last leg of its regular New Orleans-Chicago flight. The weather was threatening, with overcast skies and a light fog, but clear conditions were reported north of Springfield, Ill.

From the time of the take-off until the crash no word was heard from the crew, although the $50,000 all-metal monoplane was equipped with the latest type two-way radio.

The operator at the field gave Zier a call at 10:02 p. m., but there was no answer. Zier's watch, smashed during the crash, was stopped exactly at that time.

Examination of the plane, reduced to twisted junk, showed the landing gear was retracted when the ship fell, indicating Zier was not attempting to land when the crash came.

Flier 'Marooned' Above San Antonio Leaps From Plane

"Stuck" 6,000 feet in the air, above San Antonio, Tex., yesterday for more than an hour when the controls of his plane jammed, Lieut. Herbert Thatcher, of Kelly Field, well known here, was forced to leap to safety with his parachute.

The plane, according to an Associated Press dispatch, would neither climb or descend. He virtually was marooned in a sea of sky. During this time he flew in wide circles.

Lieut. Thatcher was married to Miss Frances Kendall Brooks, of Chevy Chase, Md., in her parents' home June 9, 1934. The ceremony was performed by his uncle, the Rev. Dr. J. Russell Verbrycke, of Berlin, Md.

Immediately after the ceremony Lieut. Thatcher and his bride left for a honeymoon in the Northwest. They then returned to Fort Meade. Later Lieut. Thatcher was transferred to Kelly Field.

Germany and Britain Protest Shelling of Vessels by Spain; Cadiz Is Claimed by Loyalists

Capture of 2,000 Men in Government Drive Is Announced.

Rebel Forces Add 4,000 Moroccans

By the United Press.

Lisbon, (Friday) Aug. 7.—An advance column of Gen. Emilio Mola's Fascist rebel troops reached the outskirts of Madrid early today, the insurgent radio station at Seville announced.

Serious Events Expected.

Lisbon, Portugal, Aug. 6 (AP).—Portuguese radio stations tonight said they had intercepted a message from a South American ambassador to Spain asserting serious events were expected "at any moment" in Madrid.

The message from the envoy to his government was said to have declared the Spanish regime's authority was merely nominal. Actual power, the ambassador was reported to have said, was in the hands of militia chiefs, who had placed vigilance cordons to prevent anyone entering or leaving the military zone, keeping the populace in ignorance of happenings.

Loyalists Claim Cadiz.

Madrid, Aug. 6 (AP).—Spanish Loyalists tonight claimed surrender of rebel Cadiz in the south, smashed toward northern Zaragoza with capture of 2,000 Fascist insurgents, and dug in for two more months of warfare to quell the 20-day-old rebellion.

(The Reuters News Agency reported, however, that rebels still held Cadiz.)

Landing of 4,000 additional Moroccan troops on the Spanish mainland, after a five-hour battle in the Straits of Gibraltar, was the chief rebel gain for the day. It brought to 8,000 the African forces now available to the southern rebels.

Both sides, admittedly in the market for munitions, faced the problem of finding any available to them with the announcement that eight European nations had agreed in principle to supply neither rebels nor Loyalists with arms.

Important Advance.

The reported capture of Cadiz marked an important advance by the Loyalists, who had been unable to penetrate the southern sector effectively since the revolt began.

Likewise, the advance toward Zaragoza was an invasion of strongly intrenched rebel territory. The government army was 11 miles from the rebel city at nightfall.

Surrender of the 2,000 rebels opened the road for swift advance, the Loyalists asserted.

An aerial survey of rebel positions inspired admission that the campaign to put down the revolt in all sectors would be a long, bitter battle.

Abandoning first efforts to dislodge the foe in one or two crushing advances, loyal forces settled down for prolonged warfare in the Guadarrama Mountains outside Madrid.

Completed Secretly.

Aviation chiefs asserted enemy positions were so well fortified, it was highly improbable the rebels could be blasted out before the better part of two months.

Many months of preparation by the rebels were indicated, the aviation chiefs said. They believed Jose Maria Gil Robles, as minister of war, laid plans last fall for the revolution and mapped strategic positions.

Gil Robles, they said, deliberately ordered maneuvers in the mountain region to acquaint troops loyal to him with the area and even then began building bombproof gun emplacements. These later were completed secretly, making necessary a slow, cautious advance by the government.

Madrid was cloaked in darkness late tonight as the government tested the city's ability to "hide"

U. S. Sends Warning to Spain Against Seizure of Property

Protection of Holdings Expected by America, Message Asserts.

By Felix Bruner.

The State Department yesterday revealed it had sent a note to the Spanish government warning that American property in that country could not with impunity be interfered with and that the United States Government will look to the Spanish government for indemnification for any property seized.

The note was delivered Wednesday to the Spanish sub-secretary of state, who replied with the promise of "immediate and sympathetic consideration."

The warning is believed to have grown out of seizure of plants at Barcelona belonging to the Ford Motor Co. and to General Motors. In addition, there have been repeated reports that private automobiles belonging to Americans have been "requisitioned."

The text of the note was not made public, but the State Department summarized it as follows:

"This Government cannot admit that private property, whether in the hands of American nationals or abandoned by them temporarily because of conditions over which they have no control, may be interfered with with impunity or denied the protection to which it is entitled under international law.

"This Government must, of course, look to the government of Spain for the protection of such property and for indemnification for any delinquency in this respect."

Reich's Action Follows Reported Execution of 4 Citizens.

Neutrality Draft Is Sped by France

Eight European Powers Agree in Principle to Curb on Arms.

The Spanish Revolt.

Germany strongly protested the shelling of a German steamer by a Loyalist Spanish destroyer and the reported execution of four German citizens by Spanish Loyalists.

The United States called on the Spanish government to provide adequate protection for American property.

British authorities at Gibraltar protested to the Spanish government and the Fascist rebels against the recent firing on a British destroyer.

France rushed preparation of neutrality pact it sponsored to prevent spread of the Spanish warfare to other nations after eight governments had agreed to neutrality "in principle."

Rebels landed 4,000 more African troops from Morocco on the southern Spanish mainland.

By the Associated Press.

Declaring a Loyalist Spanish destroyer had shelled a German steamer at Laroche, Spanish Morocco, the German government tonight made a strong protest to the Madrid regime.

The action came on the heels of reports that four Germans had been executed in Barcelona by Leftists. The German consul general there was said to have strongly protested and demanded immediate investigations.

The German citizens were reported to have been stopped while they were riding in an automobile toward the French border, although they had the required permits. They were shot after a brief court-martial, it was reported.

Tonight's protest said the German steamer Seville was fired on this week by the Spanish destroyer Almirante Valdes without warning and was forbidden to use the port again. The steamer was not damaged, the German government said.

Agreement Drafted.

Paris, Aug. 6 (AP).—France tonight hastily drafted the text of an eight-power agreement for noninterference in Spain's civil war to forestall any aid to rebel forces by Germany or Italy.

Authoritative French sources indicated the government's action was hastened by the decision of Reichsfuehrer Hitler to protest to the Letfist government of Barcelona against the reported execution of four German citizens.

French advices from Morocco tonight asserted German warships were stationed off Cadiz, southern Spain, and reported rumors they might go to Barcelona to demand apology for the bombardment of the German freighter Sevilla.

Dispatches added that the German warships were ordered to patrol the waters between Cape Spartel and Larache on the Atlantic coast after bombardment of the Sevilla.

Thompson Aids Lemke; To Run For Governor

Chicago's 'Big Bill' Enters Illinois Race on Union Party's Ticket.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—William Hale (Big Bill) Thompson, former Mayor of Chicago and a leading Republican vote-getter in many a city campaign, announced today his candidacy for the Governorship of Illinois on the Union Party ticket.

Thompson's affiliation with the new political group, whose Presidential candidate is Representative William Lemke, of North Dakota, was first disclosed by Newton Jenkins, Chicago attorney, who will be its Senatorial nominee.

Shortly afterward, Thompson, three times elected mayor, added his confirmation in a brief statement asserting:

"We're going to win this fight in Illinois.

"A majority of the people of the State are either in the Townsend plan, the Lemke plan for farmers, the Coughlin plan or the Huey Long plan. With Thompson's friends uniting behind them, there can be no doubt of victory next November."

As Union Party nominee, Thompson will oppose Gov. Henry Horner, Democratic incumbent seeking a second term, and C. Wayland Brooks, the Republican nominee.

Since the April 14 primary when his candidate for the Republican nomination for attorney general, Thomas V. Sullivan, was defeated, Thompson had threatened reprisal for what he termed "double-crossing" by party leaders.

Jenkins has been head of an Illinois group known as "The Third Party."

Some weeks ago three Chicagoans took out a State charter for the title "Union Party." They said at that time they were not connected with the Lemke candidacy.

Jenkins said he was authorized to select the State ticket for the new national party by Representative Lemke.

Anti-Roosevelt Bolters Gather To Map Plans

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Aug. 6.—A group of men once high in the councils of the Democratic Party gathered here tonight for the avowed purpose of determining the most effective method of opposing the re-election of President Roosevelt.

From preliminary discussions, two courses of action—the establishment of an anti-New Deal Democratic ticket and an effort to swing Democratic votes to Gov. Landon—emerged to be given prominence in a formal statement by Sterling E. Edmunds, St. Louis attorney, who called the meeting for Friday.

Leaders Will Attend.

Interviewed at the same time, however, Edmunds was quick to emphasize that these were only suggestions and to add that the 30 or 40 whom he expected to attend would canvass all possibilities in a closed session "where every man will be free to express his views."

Among those who will attend he enumerated: James A. Reed, former Democratic Senator from Missouri; Joseph B. Ely, former Democratic Governor of Massachusetts; Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State in the Administration of Woodrow Wilson; Daniel F. Cohalen, of New York, a former judge and long-time supporter of Alfred E. Smith; Henry Breckinridge, who opposed President Roosevelt in several Presidential primaries; Thomas F. Cadwallader, who managed Breckinridge's Maryland campaign; John Henry Kirby, Texas Democrat; William A. Comstock, former Democratic Governor of Michigan, and Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell, twice Democratic nominee for Governor of Pennsylvania.

Reed Defines Parley.

Alfred E. Smith, who, with Colby, Ely, Reed and Cohalen joined in a plea to the Democratic Convention to "put aside" President Roosevelt, has announced he will not attend.

Edmunds said he was interested primarily in "stopping the absorption of the powers of the States through legislative construction rather than through an amendment" to the Constitution.

Former Senator Reed, asked for his definition of the purpose of the gathering, shot back: "I know what I want to do. I want to do what I can to preserve the Constitution and the independence of the courts and stop wasting the people's substance."

The original idea, he said, was to

Zoo to Face Music Tomorrow—Whether Animals Like It or Not

Whether they like it or not, the Zoo's lions, tigers, elephants and perhaps a baboon or two will have to face the music tomorrow.

A company of strings, woodwinds and brasses, enlisted from ranks of the Washington Summer Symphony Orchestra, is going to unleash compositions of the music masters against the pent-up animals at high noon. Dr. William M. Mann, director of the Zoo, gave his consent yesterday.

Sidney Hamer, vice chairman of the Symphony Association, is in charge of arrangements for the ten-piece concert.

"Our principal selection," he said, "will be the 'Carnival of Animals Suite' by Saint-Saens. For the lions and chimpanzees, however, we will have to play something different. This is because the suite contains no chimpanzee passage, and to play the lion part a whole symphony orchestra would be needed.

The wild beasts will be out of luck if they try to duck the music. "If the lions, for example," said Hamer, who has worked it all out carefully, "should turn their backs on us while we are playing in front of the outdoor cage, we shall follow them inside and continue the concert there."

Several musicians were at the Zoo yesterday, testing acoustics and toning the animals' reactions, if any, to dulcet tones.

"The big cats, elephants and monkeys seemed to be touched more deeply than the birds," said Hamer. "In fact, the birds paid no attention at all."

The impending concert will be the latest of a number of stunts perpetrated upon Dr. Mann's wards in the last few years.

A couple of winters ago, on a bitterly cold night, the greater part of a full-length motion picture was unreeled in the Virginia deer pen. The idea was to see what reaction the film, which was all about a deer and a panther, would have upon the animals. The animals fell over themselves trying to get away from the screen, although they were less fortunate in battening their ears against the dialogue and sound effects.

Dr. Mann, who knew beforehand the deer would pay no attention to their Hollywood kinsmen, stayed home that night out of the cold and snow and slush.

Some time ago, in another stunt to "amuse" the big cats, an amplifier was set up outside Susie's cage and through the horn issued the stern roar of a lion featured in a "Tarzan" film. Susie yawned and fell asleep. Susie is a lioness.

Wilhelmina Rumor Officially Denied

Amsterdam, Aug. 6 (AP).—Gossip of a royal marriage linking Dutch and Swedish royalty and of the near end to thrifty Queen Wilhelmina's 38-year reign in The Netherlands was officially denied tonight.

Both sides of the rumor—that Queen Wilhelmina would abdicate her throne and that her daughter, rosy-cheeked Princess Juliana, would marry Prince Charles of Sweden and rule with him as consort—were called "absolutely unfounded."

Hohwarld, in the Vosges Mountains, France, Aug. 6 (U.P.).—Dutch Crown Princess Juliana blushingly admitted today that there is more fact than fiction in reports that her engagement to a Scandinavian prince will be announced shortly.

It was reported that Princess Juliana, 27, will marry Prince Charles of Sweden, 22, nephew of King Gustave V.

Peace Advocate Arrives Here To 'Bomb' Army With Feathers

Naked except for a pair of shorts, spectacles, tennis slippers and an Indian bonnet, Woody Hockaday, 50-year-old apostle of peace, came to Washington late yesterday to bombard the War Department with feathers.

He had his ammunition with him—thousands of assorted feathers stuffed into a bag five feet long.

"It will be the biggest feather pitching in history," said Hockaday, discussing his proposed assault on the War Department this morning.

Hockaday, former business man of Wichita, Kans., has adopted "Feathers Instead of Bullets" as the slogan of his peace tour of the world.

He was asked about his bizarre attire, or lack of it.

Hockaday, who calls himself "Chief Pow Wow," took the war path for peace in Philadelphia during the Democratic National Convention. He strode up and down Broad street, a Kansas sunflower painted on his naked chest, hurling feathers right and left until the police stopped him.

The Philadelphia white wings tried to clean up behind Pow Wow, but had to admit defeat. Every gust of wind carried the feathers away from their brooms. Finally the fire department was called out to wet the feathers and make them behave.

From Washington, Hockaday said, he will go to London, Paris, Berlin, Rome and Tokyo, battering down the war spirit everywhere with his bags of feathers.

Bachman Is Ahead In Tennessee Race

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 6 (U.P.).—United States Senator Nathan Bachman, of Chattanooga, and former Representative Gordon Browning, of Huntington, took commanding leads tonight as returns were tabulated for the senatorial and gubernatorial races in today's Tennessee Democratic primary.

A United Press tabulation showed Bachman leading Dr. John R. Neal, of Knoxville, in 961 of the State's 2,300 precincts, 93,711 to 18,006.

In the same precincts, Browning, backed by the powerful Crump machine in Memphis, led Burgin Dossett, Jackson, 81,712 to 29,000. C. W. Wright, Oneida publisher, was trailing with 2,004.

Democrats See Heavy Majority In Next Session

Will Lose but Few House Seats, Rep. Drewry Tells Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Democrats who have been keeping their fingers on the pulse of House and Senate races told President Roosevelt today that the next Congress almost was certain to have as heavy a party majority as the one ended in June.

Around the luncheon table, the President explored the Congressional political situation with Representative Patrick H. Drewry, of Virginia, and Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, chairmen, respectively, of the Democratic Congressional and Senatorial committees.

"At the present time," Drewry told reporters afterward, "there is absolutely no prospect of the Democrats losing control of the House and it looks like they will lose very few seats."

Defeats Expected.

He added that he expected defeats in some districts in which Democrats were swept into office in 1932 from districts that normally are Republican.

He predicted, however, the party would take over some Republican House positions so that the net loss to the Democrats "will be very small, if any."

With only a third of the Senate seats at stake every two years, the white-haired Virginian said, "there is no way the Republicans can get control of the Senate."

Lewis said he told the President the Democrats could not lose control of the Senate, regardless of who was elected in November. He added:

On relief problems and the question of wages for relief officials, Lewis said, the President advised him to resume discussions with Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator.

Democratic chieftains controlled the Seventy-fourth Congress. In the House the Democrats outnumbered the minority about three to one.

Talks With Old Friends.

Earlier, the President had talked with two old friends, Judge Thomas H. Dowd, of Allegany County, N. Y., and Herbert C. Pell, former New York State Democratic chairman and former member of Congress.

In between, he received from Mayor Fiorella LaGuardia of New York, chairman of the National Conference of Mayors, a plea to boost WPA job quotas by an approximate 500,000.

In a statement, LaGuardia said studies of the relief situation in most major cities had shown the mayors' conference that in a number of urban areas all of the employable relief cases had not been absorbed by the WPA or other Federal work activities.

"Up to the present time, therefore," he added, "the Federal Government has not assumed full and complete responsibility for this group."

Consequently, the mayor asserted, many communities are facing the problem of aiding needy employable persons in addition to taking care of unemployables and supplying part of the money for WPA and PWA projects costs.

He suggested, accordingly, that the Government increase WPA quotas sufficiently to give jobs to all employables.

At the same time, he said, States that have failed to appropriate adequately for relief for unemployables must act immediately.

"Some of the States," the New Yorker said, "are not playing the game and that makes it very hard for the communities. It almost is unbelievable that any State should run out and not do its share."

He mentioned New Jersey specifically, which he said "fails to do its share," and "has no right to create a health menace to New York by undermining the health of the unemployed."

Joseph Patterson, president of the New York Daily News, which has indorsed many Administration activities, shared the luncheon period with Drewry and Lewis.

Prominent Women Active in Campaign

Mrs Curtis Bok (left), of Philadelphia, member of the noted publishing family, who as a registered Republican voted for Hoover in 1932, will be active in the campaign for President Roosevelt this year.

Political Arena

Chicago, Aug. 6 (AP).—An "Indian division" was added today to the Republican National Committee's campaign organization, with William P. Wilkerson, of Chicago, a full blooded Cherokee, as its chief. Arthur M. Curtis, of the committee, called it "an innovation in Republican Party history.

Curtis said Wilkerson would begin a tour into States with large Indian populations next week. Indians have been permitted to vote since 1924, and Curtis' announcemet commented that their vote in Oklahoma, Arizona, New Mexico and North Dakota was "an important factor."

Salt Lake City, Utah, Aug. 6 (AP).—John D. M. Hamilton, Republican National Chairman, grinned as he read a statement made in Washington yesterday by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace asserting Hamilton was "showing the intelligence farmers would expect of a standpat corporation attorney dealing with farm problems." The Secretary was commenting on the Republican's recent attacks on the Administration reciprocal trade policy.

"Neither Mr. Wallace nor I know anything about agriculture," Hamilton chuckled. "The only difference is he is in a position where he can hurt and I am not."

Determination to keep the Prison Bureau and J. Edgar Hoover's Bureau of Investigation "completely divorced" from politics was expressed last night by Attorney General Cummings. In a broadcast address he said the bureaus were operated "strictly on a career basis."

"Neither of them can be reached or influenced by imprecations, threats, bribes, political power or personal blandishments," the Attorney General added. "What the political faith or partisan affiliations of the personnel of these two bureaus may be, I do not know, and I do not want to know."

Chicago, Aug. 6 (AP).—Henry Bubb, vice chairman of the Young Republican Federation, will relieve J. Kenneth Bradley, State senator, of Connecticut and president of the federation, on the latter's tour of the East and South, Republican national headquarters announced today.

Bubb will leave Sunday for New York, the announcement said, and will speak in Baltimore at noon August 10; Washington, the evening of August 10; Charleston, W. Va., twice on August 11; Roanoke, Va., twice on August 12; Albany, N. Y., at noon August 13; Syracuse, N. Y., the evening of August 13, and Buffalo, N. Y., twice on August 14.

Chicago, Aug. 6 (AP).—Dr. Francis E. Townsend, founder of the old-age revolving pensions plan, issued a statement today calling upon his followers to pursue a nonpartisan course in the coming Presidential campaign.

The Townsend organization, he said, is not a political party, and has indorsed no party.

"Personally, I am going to vote for the Union Party candidate (Representative William Lemke, of North Dakota) for President, because he is the only candidate for President who has definitely declared himself for the Townsend Plan," he said.

Chicago, Aug. 6 (AP).—Four hundred and eighty-five election judges and clerks of Cook County (Chicago) were discharged today by the county board of election commissioners on charges of permitting or committing irregularities in the April primary in Illinois.

About 200 of the 485 would be prosecuted on ballot fraud charges—making erasures on ballots, making false entries and permitting illegal voting—Board President A. J. McKay said. The others were deemed to have committed irregularities due to negligence rather than criminal intent.

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—Democratic Chairman James A. Farley tonight announced the appointment of Erle Kehaya, New York tobacco manufacturer and publisher, as head of the Greek division of foreign language department, of the campaign organization.

He also announced appointment of Morris Cukor, former New York City civil service commissioner, as chairman of the Hungarian division.

Farley said the department, when completely organized, would consist of 18 divisions representing different racial groups.

New Bedford, Mass., Aug. 6 (AP).—The Massachusetts Federation of Labor, after 45 minutes debate, went on record at its annual convention today as favoring the election of Gov. James M. Curley to the United States Senate.

Leroy Hayer Elected.

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—Mrs. Montie Beach, of Houston, Tex., tonight was re-elected president of the dancing masters of America. Other officers elected included Leroy H. Thayer, Washington, D. C. Washington was chosen for next year's convention.

Two U. S. Agents Demoted

istrative action taken by him dealt with an unfortunate situation in effective fashion. I regard the matter as satisfactorily terminated."

Neither Hoover nor Clyde Tolson, his assistant, had any comment to make, and at the Treasury it was said that Murphy and Boatwright had nothing to say.

"Upon my return to the office today after several weeks' absence, there was laid before me reports which I ordered prepared as soon as I read statements in the press relating to investigation by members of the United States Secret Service of certain agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"I was deeply shocked to learn from these reports that certain members of the Secret Service had taken it upon themselves to investigate activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The action taken by these men is one which I heartily disapprove and will not permit by any member of the Treasury Department.

"I wish to take this opportunity to express my deep regret to you and your department for this irresponsible action and to assure you that suitable disciplinary measures will be taken."

Talk of consolidating the Government's multiplicity of investigating units into one efficient whole was widespread on Capitol Hill last session, and one measure was introduced to merge the various Treasury law enforcement agencies to include agents of the Secret Service, the Internal Revenue Bureau, the Alcohol control unit, and the Narcotics Bureau. Nothing came of it, but Morgenthau yesterday approved the idea of consolidating the strictly Treasury units.

"I feel it would contribute greatly to efficiency," he told reporters. "This is what the Postoffice Department did 20 years ago, when they joined five organizations into the postoffice inspectors."

Feeling of rival undercover agencies over publicity received by Hoover and his G-men in their drive against kidnapers and gunmen, in some of which they assisted, had been common report around Washington.

Conflicting and alleged free lance activities by some Federal operatives had been targets for criticism in Congress.

Senator Homer T. Bone, of Washington, took the floor of the Senate to propose an investigation of what he called a "nascent and budding OGPU" which might easily become the instrument for political blackmail. He charged there was one "indefensible case" of Federal investigators looking into campaign expenditures of a Senator.

Questioning Hoover on appropriations for the Federal Bureau of Investigation last session, Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, remarked:

"I doubt very much whether you ought to have a law that permits you to go around the country armed as an army would, and shoot down all of the people that you suspect of being criminals, or such as you suspect of having guns, and having your own men shot down."

Murphy, who has been in the Secret Service for 35 years, was in St. Paul on an inspection tour at the time Boatwright, like Murphy, a former Presidential guard, investigated the killing of Green.

Previously there had been recurring rumors that F. B. I. men fired on Eddie Green before knowing who he was, that they only learned his identity at his deathbed, and that he was only a minor hoodlum who was shot down without warning. The Justice Department says its records refute this.

Unofficial explanation at the Treasury Department was that certain information on the killing was offered to Boatwright, that Murphy authorized him to accept it, but that Boatwright exceeded this authority by looking further into the case.

Various stories were current as to how the Justice Department was "tipped off."

One was that a Secret Service operative, representing himself as a magazine writer, approached certain parties connected with the case, and later made inquiries of the St. Paul fingerprint office, where he was recognized.

A conflicting version was that a discharged Justice Department agent was approached, and later communicated with Hoover.

Film Campaign Is Laid to WPA By Republicans

Moving Picture Propaganda Bureau Established, Says Committee.

The Republican National Committee charged last night that "a moving picture propaganda bureau" had been established in the Works Progress Administration and a contract made with Pathe News to produce films until next July at a cost of $4,320 for each 600 feet.

Under the contract, the statement said, the film organization agreed to release "one news reel story on the subject of WPA activities each month" through a national news reel.

In another statement, Representative Bolton, of Ohio, as chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, said "the new campaign handbook of the New Deal Congressional Committee, styled the Democratic Register, should prove a handy device for circumventing the corrupt practices act."

"The sale of advertising space at $700 a page affords an avenue of escape from reporting campaign contributions as required by law," he added.

Ickes Assails League.

Meanwhile, Secretary Ickes termed the announcement of a nonpartisan position by the American Liberty League "not only disingenuous, but deceptive." He said he possessed evidence that the league was set up to defeat President Roosevelt. "if it could."

Jouett Shouse, president of the league, rejoined in a statement that the league was "proud" of Ickes' "enmity." He called him the "chief common scold for the New Deal," and expressed hope that the Cabinet member would continue "to talk without restraint and without limitation."

Speaking under Republican auspices on the radio, William Hard said "the New Deal has taxed the rich until it has used them up as big sources of revenue and now it has to turn to supporting itself more out of the pockets of the poor."

The film statement by the national committee quoted from a report attributed to Sydney Mackean, who was identified as a former director of the motion picture record division of the WPA. He was authorized a year ago, it was said, to keep the public informed by films "of the status and development of projects upon which funds of the Works Progress Administration are being expended."

"Editors Were Reluctant."

"But, the Mackean report continued, "the newsreel editors were reluctant to enter into any arrangement that might make them appear as agreeing to use of New Deal propaganda. On the other hand, I assume they did not care to be put in the position of offending the Administration, or seeming to offend. They consented finally, with the single exception of Paramount Sound News, the editor of which declined flatly to enter into the agreement in any form."

"According to the Mackean report," said the committee statement, "three short films were made; one on Washington, a WPA circus, and a dam construction project. The report declares:

"'There was some talk of sending my three reels to the White House for the President to look at. They were shown to Mr. Hopkins first, however. He expressed surprised at their professional quality, but thought the Washington film should contain considerable more WPA material. He thought the propaganda 'too subtile.'"

Landon to Meet Campaign Aids In Buffalo Visit

G. O. P. Candidate Plans 24-Hour Stop Before His Speech There.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Aug. 6.—A night and a day stop in Buffalo, N. Y., affording an opportunity for personal conferences with Republican leaders in President Roosevelt's home State, was planned today for Gov. Alf. M. Landon's first Eastern campaign tour.

As his schedule is drawn, the Presidential candidate would reach Buffalo Tuesday afternoon, August 25, and remain until after his address Wednesday night.

Speeches at West Middlesex, Pa., Saturday, and Chautaugua, N. Y., Monday, would precede the Buffalo visit.

The subjects of his three Eastern addresses were not ready for formal announcement. Among advisers there were indications he would talk on Federal taxation and spending at West Middlesex, his birthplace. Some aids emphasized that nearby Pittsburgh was the scene of President Roosevelt's address on Government finance in the 1932 campaign.

A number of subjects are known to have been suggested for discussion at Buffalo, including social security, unemployment and the Constitution.

The Governor's plans prior to his Eastern trip continued indefinite.

The week-end originally had been kept virtually clear of callers with the expectation Landon would go to Estes Park, Colo., to join his family for a week or ten days. But the time for this trip, if made at all, still was undecided.

Should Landon go to Colorado, aids said latest plans called for starting his Eastern trip from there.

Visitors included Miss Daisy V. Williams, director of Republican activities among Western farm women, and John R. Munn, of Princeton, N. J.

Senator Borah, Hamilton Meet Today in West

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 5 (U.P.).—Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, and John D. M. Hamilton, fiery chairman of the Republican National Committee, will meet tomorrow either at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, or Spokane, Wash., Hamilton said here tonight after a long distance telephone talk with the Idaho Senator.

"I hope Borah sees fit to fall in solidly behind the national Republican Party," Hamilton said.

Assails Monopoly Stand.

By the Associated Press.

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 6.—John D. M. Hamilton charged tonight that the Roosevelt Administration, "despite a specific pledge in 1932, not only failed to prosecute monopolists, but actually suspended the anti-trust laws."

The campaigning Republican national chairman made his assertion in an address prepared for delivery to Idaho Republicans in this stronghold of Senator William E. Borah, militant Republican foe of monopoly.

In Alf M. Landon, Hamilton said, the people would find a President who "knows from first-hand experience" as an independent oil producer the problem of the small businessman against monopoly and a leader who would carry out the 1936 Republican platform pledge to "employ the full powers of government to the end that monopoly shall be eliminated and that free enterprise shall be fully restored and maintained."

"Gen. Hugh Johnson, Mr. Roosevelt's first NRA Administrator, said: '"There is not a single code that is not a combination in restraint of trade, and, if codes are not permitted so to restrain trade, then NRA ought to be repealed tomorrow.'

Democrat Bolters Gather

have a meeting of five or six people. "We've tried to keep it down to a conference," he said. "There was no idea of holding a convention, although I suppose we could have gotten thousands here for a convention."

The possibility of a larger meeting later was held out, however, in Edmunds' formal statement, issued after a conference with Reed.

"We contemplated a very small group with a large meeting to be held later if a course of action could be agreed upon," Edmunds said. * * * Senator Reed and I have no program, although, of course, all who attend no doubt have ideas of courses to follow. It will rest with the conference to decide the program to be followed.

"Incident to my calling the conference, I received many letters indicating various views as to what might be done, including that of placing a ticket of Jeffersonian Democrats in the field, and also that of organizing as Jeffersonian Democrats who will vote for Landon as a protest, with the hope later of restoring the party to the rightful heirs of the principles of Thomas Jefferson, as the only alternative * * *."

Judge Bonniwell, also one of the early arrivals, said that "unless this Administration is checked, democratic government is at an end now." He added that "disheartened, old-fashioned Democrats are awaiting the outcome of this conference."

When Edmunds said the meeting would probably continue on Saturday, he was asked if this might be taken to mean that he expected an organization of some sort would be formed.

"That's my hope," he replied.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenburg (Republican), Michigan, addressed the Chicago Union League Club today in the first of a series of speeches in behalf of Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee.

"In behalf of Republicans and Jeffersonian Democrats alike," Vandenberg said, "I assert that the flag of the Union in this 1936 contest is not yet red, nor even pink; that it is not yet an emblem of imported ideals and potential dictatorships; * * * that it is still the personification of the Constitution, and that it is still the banner of a free people who propose to vote themselves a new emancipation."

In New York today, Daniel J. Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, commenting upon the split of American Federation of Labor membership, said "under no circumstance" will the division between craft and industrial labor unionists "divide the leaders of the labor movement who are supporting the return of the Roosevelt Administration."

Tobin made his statement after a conference with Chairman James A. Farley, of the Democratic National Committee.

Soviet Issues Warning To 'Servile' Professor

Moscow, Aug. 6 (AP).—Prof. N. Luzin, one of the Soviet's best mathematicians who has long been under fire for alleged servility to foreign scientists, was warned publicly today to change his attitude or face expulsion from the Presidium Academy of Sciences.

Prof. Lusin was attacked recently by the Communist newspaper Pravda, which charged he was hyperritical and servile, that he published his best works abroad, and lacked the elementary dignity proper for a Soviet citizen.

Paralysis Cases Gain.

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 6 (AP).—Five new cases of infantile paralysis in Alabama and Tennessee today raised to 327 the number of persons stricken in a four-State outbreak.

Alcatraz Gates Close on Karpis And Campbell

Attorney to Seek Transfer of Robinson to Institution for Care of Insane.

San Francisco, Aug. 6 (AP).—Alvin Karpis, last of the so-called "big shot" kidnapers to go through the Government's new crime-smashing machine, was locked up in grim Alcatraz Prison tonight.

With him to the bleak rock in San Francisco Bay went two of his erstwhile companions, Harry Campbell and Charles J. Fitzgerald.

An iron-barred railway coach brought the Karpis gangsters and 17 other Federal prisoners—including three men convicted in connection with the Kansas City Union Station massacre—into Oakland this morning after a three-day journey from Leavenworth Penitentiary in Kansas.

Surrounded by heavily armed guards and cloaked in the secrecy that always attends new arrivals to the prison, the convicts were moved to a launch and sent off to the island.

Prison Population 270.

The new prisoners were ordered to take baths and await the dressing-in process, which Johnston said would require several days.

Karpis, who was captured in New Orleans May 1 after eluding Federal pursuers for many months, is under a life sentence, having pleaded guilty to conspiring to kidnap William Hamm, jr., wealthy St. Paul brewer.

Fitzgerald is under sentence for the same crime. Campbell was a companion of Karpis during the latter's long flight from the law. He was the last of the gang to be taken.

Arrival of the 20 increased the Alcatraz convict population to about 270. Its other inmates include Scarface Al Capone, George "Machine Gun" Kelly, Harvey Bailey and a score of other former Midwestern gangsters.

Seeks Robinson Transfer.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 6 (AP).—Clem W. Huggins, Louisville attorney, said today he will attempt to compel the Government to transfer Thomas H. Robinson, jr., serving a life prison term for the kidnaping of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, to an asylum for treatment of mental disorders.

Huggins, who successfully defended Robinson's father and wife here on charges of complicity in the kidnaping, said he would file a habeas corpus petition in the Federal Court of the district in which Robinson, jr., was imprisoned. He said he was unable to ascertain where Robinson, jr., was confined. The Department of Justice said at Washington today that Robinson was in Leavenworth Prison, where he was transferred after being taken to Atlanta from here when he pleaded guilty last May.

Huggins said he will offer evidence that Robinson, jr., who formerly was an inmate of an asylum in Tennessee, was insane at the time of the kidnaping in October, 1934.

Socialite Painter Marries Hill Girl

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—A rustic romance involving a 17-year-old Tennessee mountain girl and the scion of a distinguished New York family who went to the mountains to paint was disclosed today with the announcement here of the marriage of Fuller Potter, 26-year-old artist, and Miss Lucinda Williamson, of Hartford, Tenn.

The announcement was made by the bridegroom's father, J. W. Fuller Potter, who said the ceremony was performed in Tennessee July 3 by the girl's brother, a minister. The elder Potter said he approved of the union.

At Hartford, a hamlet with only one telephone, nestled in the Great Smoky range near the North Carolina border, R. L. Ford, the village postmaster, offered details of the unusual acquaintance that blossomed into love.

"She was known here as 'Cindia,'" Ford said. "The artist lived here about six months, painting scenes of waterfalls and mountains. He and Cindia were married at Newport, the county seat, about a month ago."

Chinese Beauty Seized As Narcotic Smuggler

Wilmington, Calif., Aug. 6 (U.P.).—A beautiful Chinese girl and an American man were taken to jail for questioning tonight after Federal agents confiscated smuggled drugs valued at $50,000.

The narcotic was concealed in the false bottom of a trunk found in the cabin of the girl, Marie Wendt, who was arrested by Chris Hansen, chief of the local enforcement bureau. Simon Harris was the man taken into custody. Hansen said he believed the seizure was the opening wedge to breaking up a million dollar smuggling band that operated in Pacific ports.

Arrests were made aboard the Japanese liner Heiyo Maru shortly after it docked at the harbor.

Teachers Disciplined.

Paris, Aug. 6 (AP).—Stung by criticism from public school teachers regarding the government's military program, the senate today retaliated by adopting a bill for the compulsory teaching of patriotism.

Thorpe Admits Prior Marriage In Astor Case

Doctor Claims, However, He Was Divorced in South in 1917.

Hollywood, Aug. 6 (AP).—Joseph Anderson, attorney for Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, former husband of Mary Astor, said today the surgeon had admitted a previous marriage.

The woman's name, Anderson said, was Laura Adams.

Dr. Thorpe is defending a suit brought by Miss Astor, screen star, who asks complete custody of their 4-year-old daughter, Marylyn. They were divorced in April, 1935.

The actress asked an annulment of their marriage on the ground that Dr. Thorpe had not received a divorce from Mrs. Lillian Lawton Miles when he married Miss Astor.

Anderson's announcement was the first time the name of Laura Adams appeared in the case.

"Yes, he was married before," the attorney said. "Her name was Laura Adams, and they were divorced in 1917. He's got the certificate to prove that. They were married, made their home and were divorced in the South.

"That's all I can say about it now."

When Miss Astor brought a three-headed suit, asking custody of her baby, annulment of the marriage, and abrogation of a property settlement signed at the time of the divorce, she charged Dr. Thorpe previously had been married in Florida, to Mrs. Miles.

Dr. Thorpe told newspapermen, "I have never been married." This statement was not included in his official answer to that charge in Miss Astor's affidavit.

Mrs. Miles now lives in Hollywood. She has been a constant spectator at the court hearings. She was present, on one occasion, when Miss Astor, from the witness stand, declared "he was still associating with Lillian Miles."

Anderson also was asked if Dr. Thorpe had ever been married to a woman named May McLean.

"No, he says she merely was a friend of his," the attorney replied. "We haven't discussed it much, because it has no possible bearing on the present case. As I understand it, she died many years ago. The doctor says he knew her and her family very well."

Mrs. T. R. Roosevelt Misses Birthday Party

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, widow of the former President, was unable today to attend a party given in honor of her seventy-fifth birthday at Bayville, Long Island, by the Edith Kermit Roosevelt Women's Republican Club of Oyster Bay.

About 200 persons attended the party, which was addressed by Monroe D. Robinson, nephew of the Rough Rider, and Col. Theodore Roosevelt, a son.

French Political Rallies Banned on Nazi Border

Paris, Aug. 6 (AP).—The French government tonight banned all political demonstrations within 3 miles of the Franco-German border to avoid any possibility of friction with the Nazi government.

St. Louis Crash Fatal to Spouse Of 1st U. S. Woman Air Official

Mrs. Phoebe F. Omlie, first woman ever appointed to an executive position in Government aeronautics, left Washington yesterday afternoon by plane for Memphis, to claim the body of her husband, Capt. Vernon C. Omlie, the man who taught her to fly.

Capt. Omlie, in the Army Air Corps, was among the eight persons killed Wednesday night in an airplane crash near St. Louis, Mo. An expert pilot himself, he was a passenger in the ill-fated transport. Except for a minor accident—the crackup of an amphibian in the Mississippi River, in which he and three passengers escaped injury—his own flying record was flawless.

The romance of the Omlies was one of the first romances of the air. He was a young lieutenant who had served as a pilot during the war. Mrs. Omlie, now special assistant in air intelligence under the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, was then Phoebe Fairgrave, of St. Paul, Minn., a girl with an obsession for flying.

Omlie was the one person who took her ambitions seriously. After they were married in 1922 and after he taught her what he knew about airplanes they went on a barnstorming tour, doing air stunts at county fairs and other exhibitions. They finally landed in Memphis, "stranded and broke." Later they established Memphis' first flying school and founded a commercial aviation company.

In 1927 Omlie established the first commercial airport in Memphis and later became president of Mid-South Airways, Inc., of that city, a position he held at the time of his death.

He and his wife were among the first to receive transport licenses. His was No. 200 and hers was the first issued to a woman in this country, bearing with it an airplane and mechanical engineer's license.

They taught hundreds of persons to fly, carried thousands of passengers, and made aerial maps of rivers, power lines and commercial developments. During the flood along the Mississippi in 1927 they flew mail, food, first-aid supplies, doctors, nurses and Red Cross officials into the high-water zones.

Both did all they could to promote interest in flying and to break down prejudices against air travel.

Omlie learned to fly after joining the Army and following the war became interested in commercial aviation. Several weeks ago he bought a transport plane and concentrated largely on sightseeing trips. After he quit barnstorming he became conservative and frequently said:

"We fellows haven't licked the weather element yet."

Born in Grafton, N. Dak., he was 41.

Only a few hours before Mrs. Omlie received word of his death he had phoned her to tell her he would be in Washington the first of next week and they could go on a fishing trip off the New England coast, an event they had planned to celebrate their 14 years of marriage.

When news of the crash came, Mrs. Omlie's first question was whether her husband had been at the controls. She seemed relieved to learn he had been a passenger.

Comintern Held Backing Madrid

Paris, Aug. 6 (AP).—The Rightist newspaper Le Matin charged tonight that the Communist Internationale had organized active support for the Spanish Leftist government.

It said the Soviet organization was preparing to send 5,000 men in an "international workers volunteer corps" into the ranks against the Fascist rebellion in Spain.

The newspaper said that officials of the Comintern and of the Red International Trade Union, at a meeting July 22 at Praha, Czechoslovakia, decided to raise 1,000,000 francs (about $66,000) to finance the reported corps. It said Russian workers would contribute 90 per cent of the funds.

Communist agitators, Le Matin added, already have been assigned to train the volunteers which have been ordered to assemble in the French cities of Bordeaux, Perpignan and Toulouse.

Penal Expert Deplores Putting Men in Prison

Chicago, Aug. 6 (AP).—Sanford Bates, of Washington, director of Federal prisons, criticized American jurists today for "putting too many people in prison."

Speaking before social service administration students at the University of Chicago, Bates said, "we punish crimes in America that are not punished anywhere else in the world."

Robert Albright tells the story of the expense of Government operation in a new series of articles—"WHAT COST GOVERNMENT?"—beginning in this Sunday's Washington Post.

Two Soviet Fliers Arrive at Seattle

Seattle, Aug. 6 (AP).—Sigismund Levanevsky and Victor Levchenko, Russian airmen, landed at the Sand Point naval air base here at 7:50 p. m., E. S. T., today, en route from California to Russia by way of Alaska and the Arctic.

They averaged 170 miles an hour, arriving from Alameda, Calif., so much earlier than expected that no one except the station crew greeted them.

Weather permitting, they said, they plan to hop at 11 a. m., E. S. T., tomorrow for Juneau, Alaska.

After immediately refueling their plane—it had only 15 gallons on arrival—the fliers went to the U. S. Weather Bureau to study reports.

Sanders Admits Slaying in 1929, Police Declare

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 6.—Detectives Capt. John H. Mintiens said today Harry Sanders, arrested in Washington when he signed for his bonus check, had admitted killing George McClary, a Baltimore truck driver, in Anne Arundel County in 1929.

Mintiens said Sanders, held here, confessed after three days' questioning that he "fired the shot that killed McClary" seven years ago. The prisoner will be turned over to Sheriff Joseph W. Alton tomorrow for trial probably next month at Annapolis. A statement obtained from Sanders was given to State's Attorney Roscoe C. Rowe, of Anne Arundel County.

Sanders, the detective captain said, admitted taking $192 McClary had collected on a truck route he managed for a meat packing concern but denied that robbery was the motive for the shooting. He was quoted as saying that after he and McClary had ridden in the truck most of the day, an argument arose and was responsible for the shooting.

Sanders said he drove the truck about 100 feet off the highway near Lipins Corner, took the money to make his escape and fled. The body was not discovered for four days.

For seven years, he said, he had been traveling around this section of the country, living in Washington most of the time. He was arrested Monday night when a postman called for his soldiers' bonus, through which the authorities had traced him.

Sanders' first story, told to Washington detectives, was that he had seen a hitch-hiker shooting the truck driver and had fled to escape being shot himself.

Miss Blagden, Flogging Victim, to Speak Here

Willie Sue Blagden, Memphis (Tenn.) social worker, who was flogged in Arkansas last month as she tried to investigate reports of the death of a striking colored sharecropper, will speak Monday at a meeting of the Washington Committee to Aid Agricultural Workers.

The session will be held at the Friends' Meetinghouse, 2111 Florida avenue northwest, at 8:15 p. m. Dr. D. N. Shoemaker will be chairman of the gathering.

Elizabeth Hitz, Ex-Husband to Be Wed Today

Divorced in Reno Last Year, Socialite to Marry in District Court.

Socially prominent Mrs. Elizabeth Hume Hitz, who was introduced to Washington society in 1925, married to Frederick Hitz in 1932 and divorced last year in Reno, will be married again this morning to her former husband.

Announcement of the wedding was kept a secret. Not even their closest friends were informed they would be married again. Their families refused to comment.

"We're just going to get married again—and that's all there is to it," Hitz, Washington lawyer and former assistant United States attorney, said yesterday.

Asked when he and his wife started seeing each other again after the Reno divorce, Hitz said:

"I'll tell you again: 'I have nothing to say.'"

Neither did any of their friends.

Mrs. Hitz has been living recently in Blue Ridge Summit, Pa. She and her mother motored down yesterday for the ceremony.

The ceremony will be performed in the District Court at 9:30 a. m. by Justice Jennings Bailey. Following the service the couple will leave for a second honeymoon. They will spend nearly a month in Deer Island, Me.

When they were married before they left "for a short wedding trip." Their marriage that time, too, came as a surprise to friends. The couple encountered some difficulty before they were married.

They went first to the chamber of Associate Justice F. Dickinson Letts shortly before 4 o'clock on the afternoon of January 13, 1932. Justice Letts refused to marry them, so they had to go to Justice Peyton Gordon to perform the rites.

The family of the bride-to-be denied early last night they knew anything about the forthcoming marriage. One relative said she did not even know Mrs. Hitz was in town—that "I still thought she was in Blue Ridge Summit."

Hitz admitted, however:

"The ceremony will be performed before both our mothers."

After Labor Day, Mr. and Mrs. Hitz will live again in Washington.

Police Find, Return Girl, 3, to Mother

Nancy Lee Gilbert, 3, was glad to see her mother, Mrs. Glayds Gilbert, yesterday, but she was reluctant to leave the policemen of the First Precinct station, who treated her to ice cream and orangeade.

Nancy Lee was taken to the station when she was found at the corner of Seventh and H streets northwest. She could tell police only that her name was Nancy Lee.

Later when Mrs. Gilbert returned home and discovered her daughter was missing, she called police.

2 Killed, 13 Hurt As Bus Crashes On Mountain

Passengers Imprisoned in Vehicle Several Hours Before Rescue.

Huntingdon, Pa., Aug. 6.—A young woman and a man died and 13 other persons were injured, two seriously, in the wreck of a bus which skidded off the road in a rainstorm and turned over early today.

The dead were Miss Florence Corrigan, 32, of Cleveland, and Frank Haluk, 26, of Youngstown, Ohio.

Mrs. John Kelly, of Buffalo, N. Y., and Mrs. Martha Gray, Washington, Pa., were severely injured.

All those hurt were brought to a hospital here.

The bus, driven by George Kukick, of Pittsburgh, left Pittsburgh last night for New York. It crossed a mountain road 12 miles west of here, then began skidding. It swayed from one side of the road to the other, ripping down scores of guard-rail posts before upsetting.

One of the passengers said:

"There was gasoline all over the bus and the passengers. I don't know how we escaped a fire. Six or seven were pinned inside.

"The only light we had were the headlights. Finally some highway patrolmen came. One of them climbed inside with a crowbar and worked for hours. A doctor came, too, and crawled inside to treat two women pinned in there."

The two she referred to were Mrs. Gray and Mrs. Kelly last to be carried out of the wreckage.

Others treated at the hospital were Guy Mood, Margate street, Pittsburgh; Mary Stano, Iselin, Pa.; Joseph Ferrelli, Steubenville, Ohio; John Pinevich, 21, Steubenville; Robert Hernandez, 15, Denver, Colo.; Celia Hernandez, 29, Denver; the Rev. J. T. Snyder, Fenton, Iowa; Mrs. J. T. Snyder, Fenton, Iowa; John Kelly, 36, Buffalo, N. Y.; Mrs. Mary Singleton, 37, Macon, Ga., and Cloyd Johnson, East St. Louis, Ill.

Meat Shortage Threat Blamed On Rail Rates

Delay in Reducing Freight Costs to Ship Feed Held Responsible.

By the Associated Press.

Coincident with forecasts of a marked decrease in meat supplies for 1937, the Government's drought relief committee yesterday discussed what members described as a "serious situation" resulting from delayed freight-rate reductions on feed concentrates.

The prospective decrease in supplies was pointed out in the Agriculture Department's summer survey of meat animals and meat.

Because of feed shortages caused by the drought, it said, meat supplies "probably will be almost as small as in 1935, when supplies were the smallest in the last 15 years." The curtailed supply would "be most marked in pork and the better grades of beef," the survey added.

The drought committee's discussion of freight rates went on behind closed doors.

An AAA official said privately that the railroads have hesitated to act in the absence of definite assurance they would not be prosecuted on charges of discrimination. Lack of some guarantee that feed handlers would pass the benefit of reduced rates on to the farmers was described as another factor.

Jesse W. Trapp, committee chairman, said he expected to confer shortly with E. B. Boyd, representing the traffic committee of Western carriers, who was understood to be enroute to Washington for a conference with Interstate Commerce Commission authorities regarding reduced rates on hay and forage shipments into Western States.

Eighty-five counties in eight States were placed on the list of official drought areas yesterday by the Agriculture Department drought committee, raising the national total to 841 counties in 20 States.

West Virginia was on the list for the first time with 10 counties.

Thirty counties were designated in Oklahoma, 15 in South Dakota, 11 in Nebraska, 8 in Iowa, 7 in Virginia and 2 each in Georgia and Minnesota.

Mrs. Emily Cox Funeral Is Held

Funeral services for Mrs. Emily Jean Sinclair Cox, 53, of Herbert Springs, Fairfax County, Va., wife of Dr. John M. Cox, field director of the American Society for the Control of Cancer, were held yesterday in New York City, followed by private burial there.

Mrs. Cox died Tuesday morning in New York, where she had gone with her husband, who was on a business trip. She had been ill only a few days. Dr. Cox is nationally famous for his cancer work.

A grandniece of Bishop Seabury, first Episcopal bishop in the United States, Mrs. Cox is survived by her husband and two daughters, Mrs. Grayson McAllister, of Greensboro, N. C., and Mrs. M. S. Wehrly, of Cambridge, Mass.

Widow of Bishop Is Dead in Maine

Mrs. Virginia Stuart Mackay-Smith, 86, of Washington, widow of Bishop Alexander Mackay-Smith, of the Episcopal diocese of Pennsylvania, and mother of Mrs. C. L. Marlatt, of this city, died yesterday at her summer home at Seal Harbor, Me.

Prominent in Capital society and active in St. John's Church here, where Bishop Mackay-Smith had served as rector from 1893 to 1910, she had lived alone for the past several years at her home at 1325 Sixteenth street northwest. She was a native of New York City.

Mrs. Mackay-Smith also was the mother of Mrs. Karl Boy-Ed, wife of the one-time German naval attache expelled from Washington during the World War and killed in Germany in 1930 while horseback riding. Mrs. Boy-Ed now maintains an estate near Berryville, Va.

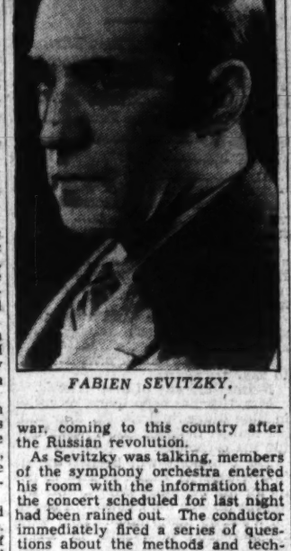
Good Music Pervades U. S. Life More and More, Says Sevitzky

Conductor, in City to Lead Orchestra Tonight, Gives His Views.



FABIEN SEVITZKY.

Fabien Sevitzky, the "bull-fiddle" player who became a symphony orchestra conductor, believes good music is becoming more and more a part of American life.

Sevitzky, here to conduct the sunset symphony at the Watergate tonight, was speaking last night in his suite at the Hotel Mayflower. A tall man, he is particularly interested in music in its relation to the United States, his adopted country.

Sevitzky told how he had organized a children's orchestra in Boston and a "sinfonietta," or chamber-music group, in Philadelphia.

"Since I came here in 1922," he said, "the American taste in music has improved tremendously. This, I think, is due in large part to the radio. Walter Damrosch, in particular, has done a great deal toward raising the American standards.

"This work that I do in Boston with the children's orchestra is, I think, my repayment to a country which gave me freedom and a chance to make a living."

Sevitzky, born in Russia, had musical ambitions at an early age. From his father, a professor of music, he learned the violin and the piano. Then he took up the study of the double bass, or "bull fiddle," and after only two months of practice won a scholarship to the Petrograd Conservatory of Music.

Graduating from the conservatory in 1911, he toured for several years as a double-bass soloist. He fought in the army of the Czar during the war, coming to this country after the Russian revolution.

As Sevitzky was talking, members of the symphony orchestra entered his room with the information that the concert scheduled for last night had been rained out. The conductor immediately fired a series of questions about the methods and technique of the Watergate group and launched into plans for the concert he will lead this evening.

Orchestral numbers will include Brahms' Symphony No. 1; the overture, "Roman Carnival," by Hector Berlioz; "Finlandia," by Sibelius, and excerpts from Bizet's "L'Arlesienne" suite.

Sylvia Meyer, who is harpist with the orchestra, will be the soloist.

Mrs. Hickman's Funeral Rites Set for Sunday

Point-of-Rocks Woman Was Mother of Mrs. Grant Hardy.

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary E. Hickman, mother of Mrs Grant Hardy, of Washington, who died at the home of her son at Point-of-Rocks, Md., early Thursday morning, will be held at 2:30 p. m. Sunday at St. Luke's Lutheran Church, Point-of-Rocks. Interment will be in St. Paul's Cemetery, Point-of-Rocks.

The widow of the late George H. C. Hickman, Mrs. Hickman was 84 years old.

Born in the Lovettsville district of Loudoun County, Va., she lived with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Ritchie, until her marriage in 1868 at the age of 16. During the Civil War, the Ritchie family were strong Southern leaders, while the family of Mr. Hickman, a sergeant in the Loudoun Rangers, were allied with the Union.

Moving to Point-of-Rocks in 1875, Mr. and Mrs. Hickman became large property holders. Mrs. Hickman continued to maintain her home after the death of her husband in 1911 until several years ago, living since with her eldest son.

Mrs. Hickman is survived by three sons, Harry C. Hickman and Sidney R. Hickman, both of Point-of-Rocks, and George H. Hickman, Warrenton, Va.; three daughters, Mrs. Hardy, Mrs. G. O. Paxson, Frederick, Md., and Mrs. Walter A. Colby, New York, and a sister, Mrs. Robert Wright, Doubs, Md. Another daughter, Mrs. Mae Hickman Bowers, died in 1929.

Electric Shock Fatal

Navy Man Killed By Electric Shock

Leo Archambault, Navy radio man on duty at the Arlington Radio Station, was killed instantly yesterday by an electric shock while he was repairing a radio transformer. He was taken to the Navy Hospital, where an inquest into the cause of his death will be held. He was 27.

Surviving is his wife, who lives at the Arlington radio reservation.

Archambault was born in Holyoke, Mass., December 12, 1908. He enlisted in the Navy from Springfield, Mass., February 1, 1929. His permanent home, Navy officials said, was at 246 Robbins street, Pittsfield, Mass.

Forest Service Aids at Funeral Of Smith Riley

Wild Life Expert a Leader in Development of National Parks.

Funeral services for Smith Riley, former member of the United States Forest Service and for years a resident of Washington, were held yesterday morning at Walter Reed Chapel. Members of the Forest Service were pallbearers.

Transferred to Washington in 1919, Mr. Riley served from 1920 to 1922 as an advisor in the administration of forestry work in Rock Creek Park. He was later in charge of big game and bird reservations administered by the Biological Survey, with headquarters in Washington.

Mr. Smith had entered the Forestry Service about 35 years ago after receiving special training at the Biltmore Forest School. In 1903 he was assigned to examination of lands for national forests in the West, and at the time of the organization of the Western inspection districts, he was placed in charge of the Rocky Mountain district, now comprising over 19,000,000 acres of forest land, where he remained until 1919.

One of the pioneers in the development of wild life and recreational resources within the national forests, Mr. Riley was assigned by Chief Forester H. S. Graves to develop activity along these lines in all national forests throughout the country.

A strenuous trip into the Jackson Hole country of Wyoming in the winter of 1919 to study game conditions is blamed for the disability which caused Mr. Riley's death.

He is survived by his wife and a sister, Miss Elizabeth C. Riley, of Montgomery County, near Rockville, Md.

Trotzky Accused By Norway Police

Oslo, Norway, (Friday), Aug. 7. (AP).—Leon Trotzky, exiled Russian Communist leader, was reported early today to have been accused by police authorities of carrying on international intrigue. Trotzky's permit to stay in Norway was conditioned on the promise that he would not carry on such activities.

It was understood police entered his home at Honefos yesterday. Officers were said to have determined that he had received a number of foreign visitors in recent weeks and had had frequent telephone conversations with Paris, especially during the recent period of widespread French strikes.

The former Bolshevik leader was described as extremely nervous because of recent Norwegian Nazi activity against him.

Witness Calls Garfield Death Badly Reported

Most Acounts Inaccurate, Says Sylvester Breen, of Alexandria.

Most of the versions of the shooting of President James A. Garfield on July 2, 1881, in the old Baltimore & Potomac Railroad Station at Sixth and B streets northwest, are either entirely or partly inaccurate, according to Sylvester A. Breen, of Alexandria, Va., perhaps the only living person who witnessed the assassination.

At the time Breen was 15, employed by the Union News Co. to take charge of the parcel checking stand at the station. On the day of the assassination, knowing that President Garfield was to board the train out of the city, Breen was lingering around the gate. Suddenly he saw the gatekeeper, Joshua Davis, dart toward the ladies' room.

Thinking a thief had snatched the pocketbook of one of the passengers, Breen followed. When he reached the waiting room he saw the President stagger out. He would have fallen had not Mrs. Sarah V. E. White, matron in charge of the room, caught him. The President slid to the floor.

The old B street station had an entrance on B street leading into the ladies waiting room, Breen recalled. President Garfield was walking arm in arm with a friend through the door, when Charles J. Guiteau, a disappointed job-seeker, stepped out from behind the storm door where he was hidden and fired two shots. The first went wild, the second hit the President in the back.

Guiteau was captured without much resistance, Breen says. In the hope that the sea breezes would aid in his recovery, the President was taken to a New Jersey resort, the train bearing him there running at the then unprecedented speed of 60 miles an hour. Officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad, Breen recollected, placed a full glass of water in the train and not a drop of water was spilled on the journey.

After the shooting, Breen became acquainted with a reporter for one of the Washington newspapers and accompanied this reporter to the jail to interview Guiteau.

"The prisoner was very courteous to me," recalled Breen. "In fact, it did not seem possible that he would commit such a crime as shooting the President of the United States."

When the new Union Station was built, the old Baltimore & Potomac Station was torn down. On the spot in the waiting room of the station where Garfield fell, a large brass star was set, the flowered carpet being cut away. A tablet reciting the tragic details of the assassination was placed on the wall of the waiting room.

When the building was torn down star and tablet both disappeared.

To locate the spot on which Garfield fell, Breen communicated with District engineers and was informed that the probable spot was near the center of Constitution avenue, some 30 or 40 feet west of the west curb of Sixth street.

Some day, Breen hopes, a permanent marker will be erected on this spot.

'It Was Right Here—I Remember Well'

On Constitution avenue, where thousands of Washingtonians daily roar past in their cars, Sylvester Breen, of Alexandria, has determined the location of the exact spot on which President Garfield stood when he was shot by an assassin.

Canadian Employes Are Paid in Scrip

Edmonton, Alta., Aug. 6 (U.P.).—Paid with $250,000 in scrip, government employes today began circulating the "velocity dollars" with which Prime Minister William Aberhart and his social credit government hopes to aid financially stricken Alberta Province. More scrip is to be put in circulation at once.

Difficulties immediately arose when many stores throughout the province refused to give change in cash, although they accepted the scrip without question. Storekeepers offered "credit notes" for change until success of the plan is assured.

Luggage valued at $48 and $250 in cash was stolen from the baggage room of Union Station yesterday, Capt. James Ward, of the Washington Terminal police, reported.

Ward said a man named Kristos Markos, of 26 Logan Circle northwest, reported the theft to him.

Search for the boy had been made over half a dozen countries for 2½ years. The former Day Dawn died in a hospital here last March.

Whale Battles Way to Victory From Captors

By the Associated Press.

Newburyport, Mass., Aug. 6 (AP). Moby Dick, famed white whale of Melville's historic romance, or one of his descendants, invaded New England waters today to re-enact one of his epic battles against two young Newburyport harpooners.

Sidney Fowler, 27, and Malcom Hudson, 20, saw the animal while fishing off Plum Island. They returned to shore, borrowed harpoons and set out to the conquest in a 35-foot power boat. Fowler, in the bow of the boat, caught sight of the whale first.

"Thar she blows," he cried in true New Bedford style, 'thar she blows and breaches and white waters."

With true aim he sunk the lily iron deep into the whale's back.

Thrashing the sea into foam with his mighty flukes, the huge creature "sounded," plunging far into the depths as the line attached to the harpoon whizzed out behind him.

While he finally came to the surface to breathe, another harpoon was waiting for him, thrown by Hudson with all his strength.

The whale sped toward the open sea, dragging the boat behind him. Swerving back toward Plum Island and then toward the Salisbury Beach Jetties, the monster thrashed the waves to a froth. The struggle was witnessed from the shore by scores of spectators.

In a lull in the battle, Fowler was able to sink another harpoon before the whale sounded again.

As the lines gave signs of weakening, the two harpooners attached barrels to them and tossed them overboard, as a drag to tire the whale by his own struggles. The two men followed closely in the motor boat, waiting for the animal to weaken. Salisbury highway department employes and Coast Guardsmen waited with tackle to haul the whale ashore once he was caught.

But old Moby Dick must have bequeathed to his progeny his own knowledge of trickery and strategem. As Fowler and Hudson, deceived into thinking the struggle was near an end, drew alongside in their boat, the whale plunged suddenly beneath them. In an instant the spinning blades of the propellor had sheared off the lines, and the whale was free. With a flip of his flukes, he turned to the deep sea.

Coughlin Praised As U. S. Defender

Rome, Aug. 6 (AP).—Bishop Joseph Schrembs, of Cleveland, pictured the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin tonight as a protector of American institutions.

"Father Coughlin," Bishop Schrembs said in an interview, "is really fighting for the preservation of American democracy which I am sure will successfully withstand European surges both toward Communism and toward Fascism."

Bishop Michael J. Gallagher, of Detroit, Father Coughlin's ecclesiastical superior, yesterday described the priest's work as counteracting anti-clericalism such as in Spain and said he encouraged him to continue it.

Body Identified As Beer Baron's

By the Associated Press.

Greenwich, Conn., Aug. 6.—Officer William King, of the Missing Persons Bureau in New York, said tonight a trussed-up body found in Long Island Sound, near here, had been identified as that of Frank McDonald, an associate of the late Arthur ("Dutch Schultz") Flegenheimer, one-time Bronx beer baron slain several months ago.

King said the body was identified by a young woman describing herself as Mickey O'Neil, 19, a burlesque actress.

Miss O'Neil, the officer said, had been questioned in connection with two recent slayings in New York, those of William Hessler and Eddie Sauchot. Officer Henry Senft, of the New York Homicide Squad, said Hessler and Sauchot also were Schultz henchmen.

His body was found partly submerged, a 60-pound iron weight tied across the shoulders.

Medical Examiner John A. Clarke said, after an autopsy, that the skull had been crushed, probably with a hammer. Officers disclosed no clews as to the identity of McDonald's assailants.

Press Drive Opened By Manufacturers

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—The National Association of Manufacturers tonight announced the extension of its information campaign by the use of newspaper advertising.

The first of five full-page advertisements will appear in Chicago newspapers tomorrow, the association said, and advertisements will be run the next few weeks in cities throughout the country. They will be financed by individual manufacturers in each community.

To "carry the story of American industry to the people" the association said its series would deal with these subjects:

"What is your American system all about?" "Machines and employment, taxation, American standards of living and America's tomorrows."

C. M. Chester, president of the association, commented that an industrial program had been carried on for three years, but that "industry's silence in the face of continued criticism against the American business system had been misunderstood. * * * The association feels that the time has arrived to provide the public with the real facts about the American system."

Runaway Girl, 15, Returning to D. C.

Gloria Elaine Carter, 15, missing from her home at 831 Eighteenth street northwest since June 4, was on her way from Asheville, N. C., to Washington with her father, Weldon Carter, last night.

The girl began the trip back home after Carter had paid $100 reward to a taxi driver, who discovered the runaway sitting on a wall in front of the fashionable Battery Park Hotel, in the mountain resort city.

Gloria, authorities in Asheville said, seemed happy enough to have her adventure ended. She was particularly pleased when she was assured that she would not have to take any more music lessons unless she wanted to.

Suspect Tells Jury of Plot To Wreck Train

Says Woman and Alleged Suitor Sought to Kill Her Husband.

By the Associated Press.

Milton, Fla., Aug. 6.—Allen Langston, 70-year-old colored "voodoo doctor" who said his "money machine had been out of whack for two or three years," today testified a Pensacola housewife offered him $400 or $500 to wreck her engineer-husband's railroad train.

Langston said Mrs. Mary Vann and Earl Travis, whom the State claims is the woman's sweetheart, accompanied him and Allen Finley, 15-year-old colored boy, to a curve on the railroad track and watched him and Finley remove spikes from the rails.

Shortly after the man's testimony, the State rested its case against the 40-year-old housewife and grandmother on trial for conspiracy to wreck the Louisville & Nashville passenger train in an effort to kill her husband, L. W. Vann, 60-year-old veteran engineer.

Vann, one of the closing witnesses for the State, said he had changed the beneficiaries for his double indemnity life insurance policies since the attempted wreck.

State Solicitor Richard Merritt charged Mrs. Vann and Travis plotted the wreck so the wife could collect the life insurance and the two could marry.

Travis is charged with a part in the plot but was granted a separate trial. The two men recently interrupted their trial on charges of attempting to wreck the train and entered guilty pleas. They have not been sentenced but face from 1 to 40 years in prison.

Embarrassing Burlesque.

In accord with the proverb, the dog Idaho has had his day. The mongrel pup of Brockport, N. Y., has just played the part of defendant in a murder "trial" that received Nation-wide publicity. Accused of drowning a young swimmer by clambering on his back, Idaho has been found not vicious but merely dangerously playful and sentenced to two years on a leash. The dignity of the law is scarcely enhanced by the spectacle.

True, a farm and markets statute in Brockport provides that dangerous and vicious animals may be put to death. When disagreement developed as to whether Idaho deserved death under these terms, it was sensible to lay the question before an impartial mind. For this, a local justice of the peace was sought out. But there the really judicial aspects of the case seem to have ended. The Brockport citizenry split loudly into two factions, some defending, some damning the dog; a defense fund was raised to employ a lawyer to argue for the dog; soon the town's fire station had to be cleared to provide room for the swarm of press correspondents which descended to report the case; the ultimate verdict was published on front pages throughout the country.

From this it might be argued that the newspapers are responsible for absurdity. In all fairness, however, that conclusion would not be accurate, for if Brockport had not made the incident unusual by raising so noisy a hubbub the story would never have warranted a line of type. Dogs are despatched daily in all parts of the world for viciousness, and the press pays no attention. No, the newspapers cannot be blamed; rather, the furore must be laid to sentimentalism. Sentimentalism in its place is delightful. But sentimentalism in any court is disgusting, as many criminal trials involving women will confirm.

As might have been expected, Idaho slept during the Brockport proceedings, being awakened only to be marched back under a police escort to his master's custody. Here, if ever, a sleeping dog should have been permitted to lie. A few moments of deliberation by the justice or anyone else could have decided the dog's fate as well and spared the law an embarrassing burlesque. And the money and sympathy raised by the Brockport citizens could have been put to far better use in rehabilitating any one of the unfortunate human beings who doubtless lay on the cots of the Brockport jail while a dog's fate was being debated in the courtroom above them.

Government In Business.

Lightly but with evident conviction, Vice President Garner told a Dallas audience that he wanted to "get out of this business of the Government in business." And to leave no doubt as to the trend of his thoughts, he explained that he had said as much to Chairman Jones of the RFC when that official sought support for an extension of his already vast powers of control over indebted private corporations.

Although the Vice President is not the first Democrat in good standing to express a desire for less Government in business, his opinions carry weight because of his position and his reputation for common sense. Whether intentionally or not, Mr. Garner has emphasized one of the major obstacles to the Government's withdrawal from activities upon which it has once embarked—that is the bureaucratic urge to grasp more power and to cling to power already acquired. Such ambition is encouraged by the public demand for Government financial assistance whenever an emergency develops.

Government aid necessarily carries with it conditions as to the utilization of borrowed funds and supervision over indebted institutions. Thus the line of demarcation between the Government as an outside creditor of distressed institutions and the Government as partner or dominant manager of indebted concerns is easily crossed. At the present time, for example, the Government through the RFC is the chief preferred stockholder in about 6,000 banks. Instead of discouraging the repayment of advances of this type by constantly lowering the rate of interest charged, our emergency organization should, as the Vice President suggests, be devising ways and means to get the Government more rapidly out of business.

A Real Crisis For Labor.

For the first time in many years organized labor is divided into two hostile camps. Both the emphatic statement of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and the bitter epithets of John L. Lewis, leader of the insurgent unions, emphasize the seriousness of the schism that has taken place. Regardless of what the merits of their controversy may have been, these are now overshadowed by the dismal prospects of a prolonged factional struggle for supremacy.

Only a slender hope of compromise seems to remain. Leaders on both sides should now be able to visualize more clearly than before the costs of disunity. Mr. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization has already announced a new drive to bring unorganized workingmen in mass production industries within the ranks of industrial unions. As anticipated by impartial labor leaders, the A. F. of L. may likewise be expected to intensify its efforts to extend craft union membership. Clashes within numerous industries seem to be inevitable. There is grave danger that most of the energy which should be devoted to improvement of working conditions will be thus dissipated in factional turmoil.

According to Mr. Green, the executive council is fully aware of this "grave situation" in the ranks of organized labor. But it is not willing to "sacrifice its self-respect" or to compromise its principles. With that position there must be a great deal of sympathy. But the drastic action taken against the unions participating in the C. I. O. is likely to defeat its own purpose. In other words, the A. F. of L. is disciplining one-third of its membership for fostering dual unionism and by that very act making dual unionism inevitable.

On the other hand, Mr. Lewis has adopted a non-compromising attitude. While claiming to act in the interests of a great majority of workingmen, he has brought the issue to a head in such a way as to encourage rivalry, disunion and consequent weakness in the labor movement.

That union men are dissatisfied with the quality of leadership on both sides is indicated by the words of Daniel J. Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters: "I do believe that there must be some resiliency on both sides by the present leadership, or the membership in general will in time find leaders who will bring about unity for the workers." Pressure from the rank and file, as well as sober realization on the part of leaders that a compromise would be easier now than after years of fruitless strife, offer some slight hope for a reconciliation. But the breach is already so wide that only a miracle could satisfactorily close it.

In spite of this fact, the controversy must be left exclusively in the hands of organized labor. The current split in the ranks pointedly illustrates the difficulties which might result from governmental sponsorship for any labor organization. Unless a compromise can be reached, the organizing activities of the C. I. O. are certain to encroach upon the A. F. of L. Federal officials pledged to the support of either would thus be drawn into hostilities and their real function as umpires and conciliators in industrial disputes would be seriously weakened.

As Gov. Landon emphasized in his acceptance speech, it is of the utmost importance that the Government retain the position of an umpire. Federal authority cannot be properly used to sponsor industrial, craft or company unions. The necessity of maintaining a neutral attitude becomes even more important because of the suspicion in some quarters that the underlying objective of Mr. Lewis' movement is the formation of a Labor Party. That issue, as well as the advance of industrial unionism raises momentous questions which labor must solve for itself.

The Problem Of Transiency.

As the State units of the social security machine begin to function, it becomes increasingly apparent that considerable numbers of dependents will still have to rely upon local and private charities for assistance. In particular, the Federal act, to which all the State acts are geared, makes no provision for those most difficult classes—families having no legal settlement, unattached and homeless men and women, and transients.

Appreciating this gap in his own State's social security laws, Gov. Lehman of New York some time ago asked a commission to study the problem. Last week the commission published its first report, suggesting that the State urge the Federal Government to assume this responsibility. Under present conditions, the commission points out, there is "an almost inevitable tendency to shift the person from one community to another as soon as possible, thus encouraging transiency instead of decreasing it."

Under the FERA, of course, efforts were made to aid homeless men but the special camps became a stimulus to aimless wandering. Today, the WPA makes slight effort to provide relief for transients.

True, a hundred or so camps have been continued, but admission is no longer restricted to transients exclusively and, in all, only a few thousand are now receiving Federal assistance. The Resettlement Administration has also had some small regard for transients, not of the "hobo" description but rather for migratory workers of the sort that follow the harvest seasons in California. There, the RA has set up two camps and has a $2,140,000 appropriation for eight more. But the fruit growers are fighting the camps on the grounds that they are hot-beds for communism.

The nearest approach to any solution of the problem seems to lie in a uniform act, drawn by an interstate committee of the American Public Welfare Association and approved by the American Bar Association. This, supplemented by reciprocal agreements between the States, can at least protect those States willing and able to aid bona fide cases overlooked by the social security act from a sudden influx of malingerers. A social security system should help to stabilize our shifting population, for transiency, in the main, is the result of prolonged insecurity. From all indications, however, the millennium is not yet near dawning.

The Part Of Wisdom.

The American Liberty League has wisely decided not to indorse any candidates or make any contribution to Presidential campaign funds. In view of its open appeal for support as an agency pledged to deal frankly but in a nonpartisan way with questions of public interest, the league would have betrayed its trust by acting otherwise.

There is no question, of course, about the league's anti-New Deal position, even though it has upon a few occasions indorsed specific acts of the Administration. It is headed by a Democrat openly hostile to President Roosevelt and most of his policies. Some of its most conspicuous supporters are likewise Democrats who have not discarded their party labels. It would be rather strange for such an organization to plunge headlong into the Republican fold.

To many dissatisfied Democrats criticism of the policies pursued by their political chieftain is not a statement of intention to desert their party and vote for a Republican candidate for President. They prefer to work inside the reservation, hoping for a change in sentiment that will facilitate a change of leadership. An organization like the Liberty League, created for the expressed purpose of educating public opinion, can perform this function much more successfully by remaining aloof from partisan conflict, and seeking to attract the stand-pat elements as well as potential party bolters.

The Liberty League could have been much more useful if its membership had been drawn more largely from the general public instead of being heavily weighted with financially powerful industrialists, corporation lawyers and disgruntled politicians. These groups readily supplied the needed funds and the sound reasoning required to expose the weaknesses of much New Deal legislation. But by reason of that very fact, the public was disposed to regard the league as a too persuasive spokesman for special and selfish interests.

This suspicious attitude has detracted from the value of the splendid contribution which the league has made to clear thinking about constitutional issues, budgetary questions, relief legislation, and many other matters of vital importance to the electorate. Its keen, objective analyses have, indeed, helped to build up an intelligent, independent opposition to doubtful policies previously accepted uncritically, because of either ignorance or indifference. Its handicap is not partisanship but special interest in the vital economic and social problems now confronting the country.

Dirt That Didn't Pay.

Some people have all the luck, and at first Alex Krunocky seemed to be one of them. For 22 months he was unemployed. Then he went to work for paltry pay on a WPA project along the shore of New York's East River. On his very first day there, he unearthed 53 double eagles. But 24 hours later he was told the stuff was counterfeit!

At the beginning of time, truth took the lead over fiction in the race for strangeness—and here it is, still a full lap ahead. Why? Because it is a master of surprises. What price now Jim Hawkins and his mother, counting that salad of coins in the old sea-dog's chest at the Admiral Benbow Inn, while Pirate Flint's men crept nearer and nearer along the dark and frosty road? What price now the buried doubloons that young Rowntree found at the siege of Louisburg?

In "Treasure Island" and "Spanish Dollars" you expect such things: the plots are frankly constructed around hidden wealth. The very titles tell you what will happen. Art, if it startles, must startle you within the fixed frame of certain rules imposed from without; it must convince you by its human reasonableness—whereas life runs on beyond human reason and makes up its rules as it goes along.

Life's use of anticlimax—forbidden to art—has ruined the romantic-literary values of the Krunocky Saga. The trouble was that the world had changed too much since $20 gold pieces went out of circulation: those coins were as difficult to identify as any pieces-of-eight in the treasure of Capt. Kidd.

Squeeze a certain type mechanical doll and it will cry "Mama!" Place any type politician on the stump and he will yell "Economy!"

Another deplorable fact is that there are so few honorable ways of making a living without working.

In politics there are few exceptions to the rule that a man is on the same side of the fence his pocketbook is.

Trade Union Position.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Government makes it clear that it favors no particular union or particular form of employe organization or representation. The Government's only duty is to secure absolute and uninfluenced freedom of choice without coercion, restraint or intimidation from any source. Unfortunately, in view of the recent court and labor relations board decisions, the above is all any candidate for President can say.

If there is anything more detestable in America's economic life than the so-called company union, we have not yet come upon its foul trail. The company union, as we have it in the United States, is an aggregation controlled by the owners. Thus, in a conflict of rights and interests, the worker is left without a representative. He is in a position of a man robbed of his property who must leave his defense entirely to the attorney for the thieves.

Generation after generation of people have been born, have labored, have died without ever knowing the common decencies of life in our land. Their fathers before them and their children have never known what it was to enjoy the so-called life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness, just barely clinging to the ragged margin of life, simply because they couldn't buck the powerful and highly integrated organized industry that has forgotten the Golden Rule and lost faith in reason. In recognition of this, labor organizations were brought into existence, to give the worker a means of protecting his rights.

It must be apparent therefore, to any serious thinking individual, that if the wage earners are to obtain justice, it must come through collective efforts, under leadership of men of their own choosing. In a word, labor, too, must organize, if it is to contract with the owners on a basis of equality. In this, the workers solicit the whole-hearted support of a generous public and press.

Costly Ignorance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hearty congratulations are due Adele Neville for her splendid letter to The Post upholding Dr. Tugwell's administration of farm resettlement work. As she points out, resettlement is purely voluntarily and no compulsion whatsoever is used by the Government.

The writer has been long indignant at the useless, senseless and destructive criticism poured out against Tugwell's activities, which are invariably constructive. He can afford to ignore all such attacks, but the people, generally, should come to his defense, as he is only interested in the general welfare.

There are many obstacles placed in the way of the great leaders, such as Ickes, Wallace and Tugwell. If we had a Socialist administration from top to bottom, as we should have, these men could accomplish much more at far less cost. It is not their fault, it is the fault of the apologists for the broken-down capitalistic system. These selfish interests sabotage all movements for the benefit of the underprivileged. Yet the economic autocrats have more than enough, and to spare. "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon."

As a Treasury Department official said some years ago in my presence: "When the American people get really intelligent, they will all be Socialists." I doubted this at the time, but the events of the past eight years convince me that he was entirely right.

Because many of our people have carelessly allowed themselves to be misled by scheming demagogues, such as Coughlin, G. K. Smith, Townsend and Hearst, they are now milling around in disgraceful confusion. Had the people generally read up on Socialist principles, they "would now know what it is all about" and would be prepared to pass peacefully and peaceably from anarchistic, capitalistic chaos to a classless society of abundance for all. Our ignorance costs us many billions, collectively. It will cost billions more, probably.

Anonymity In The Letter Columns.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to the proposal of Mr. Charles M. Brooks in The Post of August 5 that you require and print the real name to letters you publish, I want to urge further that if you do so in order to complete the personal identification of the writer, you require the writer to set forth whether he has any selfish or other interests, direct or indirect, in connection with the subject-matter written about.

I think the partisan and selfish interest of Mr. Brooks is quite apparent from his letter. Unquestionably Mr. Brooks is a partisan New Dealer. He has a good Government job in no way requiring a "career" purpose to serve his country for life or a "merit" civil service qualification, as the Congressional Directory reveals.

Certainly, Mr. Brooks cannot object to the publication of this fact in view of his letter, namely, that the writer of every letter published in The Post identify himself personally and selfishly.

My chief and fundamental objection to most of the New Deal policies is that I believe that there is not a scintilla of patriotic American statesmanship back of them, and that they are nothing but "molasses to catch flies"—nothing but low-down practical politics.

J. D. MASON.
Washington, Aug. 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to challenge Mr. Brooks to tell us what New Deal job he has, how he got it, what he really does for the salary he draws from the United States Treasury, how much salary he draws and how much time off from real work he has. When he reveals his true identity and real interest his demand will come with more grace and sincerity. I have just consulted the Congressional Directory and I find that he has a juicy piece of New Deal patronage.

I know that the New Dealers will no more permit a "career" Government employe to criticize publicly any of this alien, un-American, Russian, Federal foolishness; I know further, that Hugh Johnson, Ray Moley, George Peek, Lewis Douglas and a host of others were not permitted even to disagree with the dictator of the New Deal.

ONE WHO HAS REASON TO FEAR FOR HIS CHERISHED AMERICAN FREEDOM.
Washington, Aug. 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Charles M. Brooks in The Post of August 5 urges you to print the real names instead of the pen names of writers of letters in order that New Dealers may know and, of course, go after "their enemies," just as they have even gone after their disagreeing friends and even their brain trust advisers.

If it is the real identity and real interest of writers of letters in The Post that Mr. Brooks thinks ought to be revealed, may I most respectfully suggest to Mr. Brooks that his appeal would have come with more fairness and more force if he had revealed his real purpose by having stated his partisan interest and the job, salary, etc., he holds down as a New Dealer.

Mr. Brooks' proposal runs true to New Deal dictatorship. In essence it is the customary communication muzzle on free personal expression and personal freedom.

I hope you will let letters' contents speak for themselves in true American freedom of press and free speech form.

Reply To Mr. Morse.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you grant me space to reply to Mr. Stanley F. Morse's unreasonable letter of August 5? In the first place there is nothing subtle about the New Deal; it is open to the world for scrutiny.

I think very little of a man to call an Executive of our country a double crosser just because he fails to comply with some of his whims. I deny absolutely that President Roosevelt has disgraced his high office. He has done all in his power to help common people.

Yes, there are millions of people who can not be shocked as they once were. I wonder if Mr. Morse remembers the Tea Pot Dome? He speaks of the Constitution being changed. Does he know the creators of the Constitution were slave holders and that they thought the common people were below the slave. Yes, remember Spain. We were not far from that state of affairs in 1933 with banks closed, fortunes lost, men taking their lives because of loss of fortunes. By the way, how many bank failures have you heard of since Mr. Roosevelt has been President; how many business failures compared with back of 1933?

Bless your soul, Mr. Morse, the "have-nots" do not want a cent of your wealth. Give them what belongs to them and you will not have any trouble with them.

Death Sentences.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A news item in your paper this morning quotes the obiter dicta of a Chicago judge whose duty it was to sentence a woman to death against his private convictions. In the case at bar the judge is reported to have said, "Capital punishment is repugnant to the court's reason and spiritual convictions." One is tempted to speculate that it is equally repugnant to the sensibilities of many other humane jurists throughout the land, who, although powerless to change existing statutes, are convinced that the ancient Mosaic law should be abrogated.

This recalls to mind that a few years ago there was a group of advanced and thinking persons in the United States, under the leadership of Clarence Darrow, striving to arouse public sentiment for a constitutional amendment to do away with the death sentence. The Post recently commented editorially on the barbarous aspects of a bungled execution, and, if I am not mistaken, took the stand that capital punishment is not a deterrent to murder.

It is hoped the movement to bring about abolition of the death sentence, except for treason in time of war, will be revived by civic-minded persons interested in freeing our country from this relic of a less enlightened era.

'No Parallel With 1914.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial entitled "No Parallel With 1914 in the issue of August 4 is excellent. Its force lies in the cool, detached, analytical summary of current events as compared with the hysterical rantings of the so-called peace societies.

Their glorified sewing circles, called "conferences" are doing more to undermine a constructive estimate of the entire situation of today than are the editorials which appear in their several magazines.

The next war "which every one fears and nobody wants" is coming. But there is no good reason for a blind, unreasoning, fearful attitude toward it. Of course war is hell. All the more reason for doing something about preventing it, and I think editorials such as the one in question would have a distinct tendency to put people on a basis of intelligent understanding rather than as they seem to be now, sheep-like in their futile following of well meaning, but misguided, advocates of peace.

The Post Impressionist

Reintroducing An Alsace Ace.

Post Office, Friday.

OUR eye is caught by a two-line dispatch in a dim newspaper corner—caught only because the sentence contains the name of a man the Post-Impressionist used to know. The dispatch is dated from Paris:

"The Air Ministry announces the promotion of Rene Fonck to the rank of lieutenant colonel in the Reserve."

That's all—except an equally brief editorial note explaining: "Fonck was a French air ace during the World War."

* * *

* * *

Guynemer was the first wartime French air idol. Nungesser succeeded him. But Fonck's reputation was just as great as Guynemer's or Nungesser's—and just as well deserved.

* * *

Fonck's Croix de Guerre has 15 silver palms and as many in bronze. He is a commander of the Legion of Honor. Above all, he has the Medaille Militaire. And he doubly earned every one of these decorations. If, when he wore them, he tried to add those as deservedly received from the allies of France, there would scarcely be room for them on his chest. But he doesn't try.

* * *

At 19, or thereabouts, he went to Paris to learn to fly, and earned his tuition by working in machine shops. He had just completed his primary air-education when the war came along. Because of his seeming frailty and undeniable youth, the flying corps at first declined him—without thanks. However, from the fold of the engineers, he kept pestering the air people until, in the summer of '16 he got his heart's desire.

He was a born machine-gun marksman. He felled his first enemy during early August. It wasn't long before his hutmates inquired why his nights were restless.

"I regret that I disturb you," he apologetically told them. "You see, I find it a little difficult to sleep after a day of ten combats."

* * *

He became a sergeant—a lieutenant. He was given command of the most adventurous squadron under—or over—the French tricolor: the "Cigognes," the Sixth Patrol Squadron, where he had with him some of the best of those Americans who afterwards served in the Lafayette Escadrille: among others, Norman Prince, Haviland, Lufbery, and the two Rockwells.

* * *

"Real fighters," said Fonck later; "chivalrous and personable. I wish I could have kept them."

* * *

One day, in 1917, the Germans got Fonck's friend Chaput. Next morning, Rene started out from the airdrome alone.

"I go to revenge Chaput," he informed the squadron.

He met a bevy of six German planes—sent three down in flames, forced the others to tail high for home. He cruised the sky until he encountered nine more of the enemy—and brought down three.

* * *

A little fellow, this Fonck—physically. He stands only some 5 feet 4 in stockinged feet. He is, or was, delicately, though toughly, fashioned. His head is covered with a veritable thicket of black hair—probably turning gray now—and his black moustache is, or used to be, no better than Chaplin's. The soldiers called him "The Little Butcher." He had a smile like a Cherub.

He didn't care much for wine. He didn't care anything for women. He is modesty itself, for he once said:

"I have never met a woman who was modest enough in her affectionate ambitions to consider stealing my heart."

* * *

Guynemer was shot down in the autumn of '17; he had 80 enemy planes to his credit. Nungesser's record was 45—and a broken body; he and his companion, Coli, vanished on their attempted peacetime flight from Paris to New York. Fonck engaged in more than 450 fights, downed 75 planes "officially," 125 "unofficially"—once knocked out half-a-dozen in 14 minutes, the World War record—and ended a war career (which was begun by more than a year in the trenches) without a scratch on himself or any of the craft he captained.

* * *

"The Air Ministry announces the promotion of Rene Fonck to the rank of lieutenant colonel in the Reserve." And the dispatch is headed: "France Honors Fonck."

Had we been sitting at the copy-desk which handled this piece of news, we should have made that head read: "Fonck Honors France—Again."

Glorifying Democracy.

As events have turned out it would have been a great mistake for the Americans to withdraw from the Berlin Olympic Games, for they have had the luck to figure in certain incidents which have redounded to the honor of democracy and the shame of the dictatorial concept of sport.

The Americans make no politics, as the European phrase goes, when they take the field to run, jump and kick or hurl certain objects for sport's sake. But the dictators make politics of sport, and the Americans, in spite of themselves, were cast in the role of democracy's representatives. Under the dictators sport is a means to the end of producing soldiers for the next war. In this country and Great Britain sport is either fun or a livelihood, and even those who make their living at sport would play the game for fun if it offered no returns. The customers never derived more pleasure from one of Babe Ruth's great days at bat than the Babe himself, and Mickey Walker, a professional fighter, loved to fight.

The American team will win, thanks to the Negro athletes, whose presence on the squad is proof of the democracy of sport in this country, and the result necessarily will discredit dictatorial sportsmanship, according to the values established by Adolf Hitler and Mussolini. The Americans didn't ask for it, but the two Caesars did and, inasmuch as they were asking for it, they got it. They made the conditions.

Of course, Hitler had no place at these games at all. He is a highly controversial political figure and should have remained away instead of converting the exercises of the first two days into political demonstrations. True, he built the stadium and the Olympic Village, which presently will became the officers' quarters of an army post, but sport is not a matter of grandstands and engineered running tracks. When sportsmen take the field for a game under true sporting conditions there are no Caesars in the stands. In fact, there are no stands.

• • • •

So what has happened up to now:

Hitler hogged the show on the opening day, and on the first day of the athletic program the Nazis presented those events in which they were strongest in order that their Caesar might receive the adulation of his subjects as he congratulated the winners. But when the American Negro athletes began to win Caesar tin-canned it, as they say in the prize fight business, squirming out of his seat so that he would not have to admit in public before his subjects the fallacy of his decree of Aryan supremacy. Mighty Caesar was routed from his throne by a couple of colored boys of the familiar American type—not Nazis, distinctly not Aryans and not even Democrats or Republicans as far as anyone knows, but just players in a game.

Caesar's hosts already had given the Americans the raspberry for their refusal to dip their colors to a man who is enemy to all that democracy means, and now Caesar himself hid away in a secret cavern, protected by his Black Guards, with side arms, to greet the Caucasian winners in private and avoid the humiliating admission that an Aryan can be licked.

Ridicule is mightier than the sword, and the American sportsman hates a mucker. And in his reading of the sport pages these next few years he will be constantly reminded of the mucker who couldn't find it in himself to be even decent, much less sportsmanlike, when the breaks went against him.

• • • •

It says that in the soccer game between the Americans and the Italians, an Italian player was ordered out of the game by the referee. At that, half a dozen Italian players surrounded the referee, pinioned his arms and placed hands over his mouth. So the Italian was allowed to remain in the line-up and finish the game.

"The whole American team took the incident good-naturedly and did not appear to be disturbed by the way in which they were eliminated," the correspondent reported.

Prince Humbert of Italy was one of the spectators, and any sporting satisfaction which he may derive from that demonstration is his to enjoy, although the prince knows something about sporting honor and doubtless cringed internally at the spectacle.

The Olympic Games are distinctly out of hand, and one might say that we should avoid them for a few Olympiads except that they provide a rare opportunity to glorify democracy by contrast in the strongholds of its enemies.

Chicago Fires 485 Clerks of Election

Chicago, Aug. 6 (AP).—The Cook County Board of Election Commissioners discharged 485 judges and clerks of election who worked in the April primary today after four months of investigation into irregularities at the polls.

Approximately 200 of the group faced prosecution by the State's attorney's office on charges, including making erasures on tally sheets, making false entries and permitting illegal voting.

Alexander J. McKay, president of the board, said the number discharged "was probably the greatest number of election officials ever discharged at one time."

"They will never serve again," he added.

Half of those dismissed were women, McKay said. He said those who did not face prosecution had committed irregularities and were negligent but that the evidence against them was not deemed sufficient to warrant State's attorney's action.

Prisoners Must Work

Prison Industries Reorganization Administration Now Aiding States In Age-Old Problem Of Rehabilitating Convicts.

Following are extracts from an article by Ruth A. Lerrigo which appeared in the July issue of the Survey:

"LET US GO all the way or none," said the committee appointed by President Roosevelt to study the critical problem of prison industries, forced into the open by general depression conditions. What "all the way" means is now coming clear in the first studies and reports, State by State, of the Prison Industries Reorganization Administration, outgrowth of that first committee.

It means that prison industries are not a thing apart, a "frill" of prison administration, but are at the very core of the whole theory of crime and punishment, part and parcel of the penal system.

For, sooner or later, nearly all prisoners come back. Direct from prison to you, sixty to seventy thousand men each year, discharged from America's State and Federal prisons, troop back into her communities, to act and feel much as their months or years "in stir" have made them act and feel. Of all prisoners committed by the courts only a negligible few (under 2 per cent in recent years) receive life—or death—sentence. The rest return eventually, to freedom; to sit by you in trolleys, busses, trains and movies; to join in the quest for jobs, or to find other means of subsistence; to meet again the old temptations while trying to find a niche in a world from which they have been barred for countless days and dragging years.

"Catch 'em; slam 'em in prison and forget 'em" may be good adventure-story tactics, but the increase of G-men and steel cells to keep pace with the increase of criminals can become a costly business. Rebuilding men in prison giving them a vocation with a chance of an honest living safeguarding their discharge with real parole supervision though unromantic and slow, are the methods calculated to subtract, not multiply crime. And these are the methods that the Prison Industries Reorganization Administration, and its board, appointed by the President in September, 1935, is advocating in the course of its attack on the problems involved in unemployment and idleness in State prisons.

PIRA Ordered To Work With States On Problem.

BY EXECUTIVE ORDER, the PIRA was directed not only to conduct, in co-operation with the States, surveys of industrial operations and allied activities carried on by the State penal and correctional institutions, but also to formulate and recommend for Presidential approval a program for replanning and reorganizing existing prison industrial operations and allied activities. Besides a plan to relieve private industry and labor of competition from prison-made goods, the PIRA was asked "to assist the States . . . to eliminate idleness and provide an adequate and humane system of rehabilitation for the inmates of such institutions."

In explaining the plans of the PIRA, soon after the issuance of the Executive order which gave it existence, Judge Ulman (the chairman), said:

Our board understands that conditions are not alike in any two States . . . Existing prison plants run the gamut from almost medieval dungeons to modern buildings with ample light, air and plumbing, and workshops that compare favorably with those erected by private industry. Some States have prison farms; others, where climatic conditions permit, employ a large number of their prsoners in road construction and similar outdoor activities. Some States have considerable investments in tools and machinery . . . Just one thing is common to all these varied set-ups. The spectre of prison idleness stalks through every system in every State.

Thus, the first line of attack was upon idleness. The State-use plan, as the board is developing its program, is the manufacture at State expense, by State-supported prisoners, of goods and services to be used by the State itself, its political subdivisions, and tax-supported institutions and agencies, for their needs. The element of competition with private industry thus is minimized and tax costs for State institutions are reduced.

To assure success of the plan, a State law with sufficient "teeth" to make certain that State Institutions actually do consume the products of that State's prison labor is essential. Broadly interpreted, State-use includes State public works, such as road building, State farms and the like. This is the field in which the board believes the employment of prisoners must be sought. Local problems differ and the PIRA plans no one scheme to solve overnight a hundred-year-old problem, but rather individual study of each State, preparing the ground for moving ahead intelligently and building in general toward a State-use basis.

Kentucky First To Use Administration's Services.

THE EXPERIENCE of Kentucky gives a graphic demonstration of the usefulness of the new administration. Prison conditions in Kentucky had become acute some time before the PIRA was set up, so that public interest had been aroused and the State Planning Board already had made a usable start on studying the situation. It was obvious in this State that, even if investment and machines sufficient to provide useful employment for the prison populations could be crowded into the two ancient existing institutions, there would not be enough State-institution use to consume the products, if State-use were narrowly interpreted. Further, the only existing institutions are of the maximum security type, though one is called a Reformatory, and although nearly 60 per cent of the prisoners in Kentucky's two penitentiaries have never been in prison before, according to the records.

Up to this year, when a broad re-organization law was passed, there has been no probation and no adequate parole system in Kentucky. The institutional building program has been curtailed. There is no opportunity for segregation or classification of prisoners, except an inadequately separated wing for women.

With a capacity of 1,700 the Frankfort Reformatory housed 2,698 on the date of the survey and, with a capacity of 540 single cells and no adequate dormitories, the Eddyville Penitentiary held 1,241 inmates. Even if these antiquated structures housed only their normal capacity, the report indicates, they would fall far short of modern standards. They are in poor repair and lack even minimum sanitary facilities and their structure and function do not permit classification and segregation of prisoners.

With the co-operation of the Governor and Department of Welfare of Kentucky, the PIRA has developed recommendations for a re-organization which promise to remove the prison system of that State from near the bottom to the forefront of States. Beginning with new construction to provide a receiving and classification unit, and later addition of needed medium and minimum security institutions, the Kentucky plan looks toward a real solution of its problems of prison industry and employment, based on a diversified State-use system.

State farms, forestry projects and modern road camps—not the malodorous chain gang variety—will provide for carefully selected "safe" prisoners, healthful and comparatively normal employment. A diversified plan for production of such goods as Kentucky institutions can consume may include commodities of all sorts, from farm produce to furniture, concrete and shoes. The PIRA has tabulated fully and in its report discusses the practicability of the whole range of possible products. Idleness is fought further, in the Kentucky plan, with recreational, educational and vocational means of employment. Provision of health, psychiatric and other professional services is taken into consideration.

Maryland is not far behind Kentucky in taking advantage of the opportunities provided by the PIRA. That State also invited study, and the report of the PIRA has been submitted to the Governor and interested officials. Work has begun in Delaware, Vermont, West Virginia, Oklahoma and Arkansas. Invitations from a dozen other States are waiting attention by the PIRA.

Thus, a far-sighted idea has become a reality. Whether or not the work of the PIRA will reach its logical conclusion, whether ancient abuses will be remedied all over the Nation, and the increase of crime be attacked at last at this, one of its true roots, will depend upon public acceptance.

The prison labor problem, like other social and economic questions, can never be "settled;" but the Prison Industries Reorganization Administration may become a permanent piece of Federal machinery. Federal aid will be a powerful incentive. But this achievement will be assured only by the urgent demand and insistent backing of an informed public opinion in the States themselves.

Usually the liar point is reached about the last week in June, although there have been campaigns when it was reached in May. "As an old-timer I think the villifiers in the 1936 campaign are pretty mediocre. Compared to some campaigners I remember, as invective hurlers they are sissies!

"I could name a lot of old-time politicians who wouldn't even start villifying until they had thought up some rougher terms of vituperation than anybody has yet used this year. Of course they didn't get full credit on account of the radio not being in use in their day. Their colorful and sulphuric language was confined to small areas. The papers wouldn't reprint it and few people would repeat it.

Reserve Board To Keep Policy Of Easy Money

New Requirements Won't Hurt Credit Expansion, Bulletin Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

A continuation of what the Federal Reserve Board described as its "easy money policy" in spite of a forthcoming 50 per cent increase in member banks' reserve requirements was announced yesterday in the Federal Reserve Bulletin.

Saying member banks will still have nearly $2,000,000,000 of excess reserves, the Federal Reserve Board said the rise in requirements ordered for August 15 "is not a reversal of the easy money policy pursued by the system since the beginning of the depression."

Money conditions have continued easy since the announcement of the increased reserve requirements last month, the board added.

Excess reserves are the funds of member banks kept on deposit with the Federal Reserve banks in addition to the amounts required by law. They have built up rapidly in the last half-dozen years.

The board said a credit expansion of $16,000,000,000 could be supported by the excess reserves which will remain even after the new regulations go into effect.

If reserve requirements had not been raised, the Bulletin contended, excess reserves would have served as a basis for a $42,000,000,000 expansion in deposits.

The check-rein which the new rules will place on a possible credit inflation will operate not only through the elimination of excess reserves, the board said, but also through cutting down the potential expansion on the basis of remaining reserves.

Previously member banks have been able to support $12 of deposits on $1 of reserves, the Bulletin said, while in the future a $1 reserve will support only $8 in deposits.

The board said that member bank reserves now total $5,900,000,000, of which more than half are excessive. It estimated that total reserves would rise to $6,300,000,000 by the time the new requirements go into effect August 15.

Magnus, Free Lance, Soldier, Invents Aerator to Assist Fish

Norwegian Boy Who Came to This Country to Fight Mexicans Has Had Varied Career; Is D. C. Police Aid.

Adventurer, soldier of fortune, sailor, advertising writer, newspaperman, John Magnus, Detective Bureau desk clerk has turned inventor. He has just completed an aerator for aquariums.

This aerator, about the size of a small electric fan, Magnus says, not only provides plenty of fresh oxygen in the water but also fans the surface to dissipate the deadly carbon dioxyde generated by the breathing of the fish.

A solidly-built, tow-headed, blue-eyed boy was stretched on the floor of his home close to the fjords of Norway reading a newspaper account of warfare in Mexico. He stopped reading, gazed at the flickering shadows on the walls and a quixotic dream was envolved. He would go to America and fight the Mexicans.

A few months later he stood upon the deck of an incoming liner and gazed in awe at New York's magnificent skyline. Only 14 years old, this modern conquistador had taken his first steps.

Magnus joined the Marine Corps and was sent to New Orleans. Life was dull and the Mexicans were behaving. With his enlistment ended, he became a deckhand on an oil tanker plying between Galveston, Tex., and Tampico, Mexico.

In Tampico, when the uprising began, Johnny was caught in the middle. He was shot at several times, so he decided to leave Mexico to "better men than he."

He was leaving Tampico when he was shot in the leg. Johnny plunged into the Tampico River, swam to the other side, was captured, but escaped to an American gunboat.

Back in the States, Magnus found new excitement. War was declared with Germany. He rejoined the Marines and was sent to France as a dispatch bearer in the Second Division.

In the Meuse-Argonne he was one of 74 men left alive in his company after the battle. At St. Mihiel he raided a German storehouse to supply food for his slowly starving "buddies." Running dispatches, he was knocked out by shell concussion three times. Six days before the armistice his luck failed and he nearly died of gas.

A year later he bounced out of the hospital, looking for more adventure. His blond hair was sparse and the blue eyes now twinkled behind shell-rimmed glasses. Interested in newspaper work, he became an editorial writer for Leather Neck, official Marine magazine. When Magnus' enlistment ended he became an advertising writer.

It was in the advertising business, Magnus said, he made his big mistake. A cheese firm, then a small concern, offered him a job as advertising manager at $24 a week. Magnus turned it down. "Today," he replied, "I would make twice that a day, I guess."

With the Mexican trouble and the Great War ended and things slow in the advertising line, Magnus turned to the Police Department for excitment. He always liked uniforms, anyhow!

Ellery Queen

By William Lyon Phelps.

"Halfway House."

One of our best writers of murder-mystery books calls himself Ellery Queen, and so far as I know, that is what his father and mother called him. A few years ago, he captured the public with an ingenious and exciting thriller—speedily followed with eight others. These nine books all end their titles with the word mystery. "The Roman Hat Mystery," "The Siamese Twin Mystery," "The Greek Coffin Mystery," etc. They are genuine thrillers, they are well written, they are studded with interesting quotations from classic literature, which will please those who recognize them, and will not annoy those who don't. I have enjoyed all these books. Ellery Queen and his father are a remarkable pair of sleuths.

But now and all of a sudden Ellery Queen has beaten his greatest rival—himself, his own past; the most cruel and uncompromising competitor any artist has to fight.

• • • •

His new story, with its entirely different and unexpected title, "Halfway House" (and the unexpected change from the titles of the nine previous books is discussed in a foreword) is a whole class ahead of the nine. This novel has not a dull page, paragraph, or sentence; it is both ripping and gripping. My attention was seized by the first page; partly, I admit, by my intimate topographical familiarity with the scene—Trenton, New Jersey. But any other town with the same story would have done well enough. The persons in this drama are divided into three groups—The New Yorkers. The Philadelphians, The Trentonians. I don't know why the author made his most offensive character a polo player. I don't play polo, because I can't ride a horse; but every polo player I have ever known, and I know many of them intimately, are all exceedingly attractive. However, that's a small matter; in a murder story, anything can happen.

I suppose other readers do not share my dislike of another feature, which this novel has in common with many other thrillers; I suppose so, because if they did, the writers and publishers would not make use of it. On page 252 the reader is challenged. He is told that all the elements of the plot are now before him, and he is invited to work his brains and see if he can solve the problem.

• • • •

This always irritates me. I read murder stories for pure diversion and for nothing else. I would no more waste my time in trying to guess their solutions than I would do anything else that was unpleasant and futile.

Civil Warfare In Labor Ranks Feared Likely

Rival Union Chiefs Dispute Effect of Suspension of Lewis Rebels.

By the Associated Press.

Fear of a prolonged civil war in labor ranks over the conditional order of the American Federation of Labor executive council suspending ten member unions was evidenced yesterday by a dispute between rival leaders over the immediate effect of the action.

William Green, president of the federation, meanwhile took issue with a Committee for Industrial Organization estimate that suspension of the unions would split a "substantial majority" of central labor bodies.

About 1,000 of these central bodies—each representing all the local unions in a community—are scattered throughout the country. Regarded by labor men as extremely important, they handle all local issues.

"Substantial Majority."

After the federation's executive council ordered the suspension of the ten Committee for Industrial Organization unions unless they withdrew from the committee within 30 days, Green explained to reporters that suspended unions would be put out of all State federations and central bodies.

John Brophy, director of the committee for industrial organization and John L. Lewis' first lieutenant in the committee's drive to bring all workers in each big industry into one union, told reporters this would split "a substantial majority" of the central bodies.

Green maintained, however, that "less than one-third" would be affected.

Talk Speculative.

Those central bodies in the mining and garment centers, he said, would be the only ones "seriously affected."

Except for this exchange, most of the Capital's labor talk yesterday was speculative, with leaders of both federation factions declining to talk for publication.

The possibility of a bitter civil war in labor ranks was conceded privately in both camps. Leaders, however, denied that campaign plans for such a war had been drawn.

It would break out, they said, if the Lewis unions were expelled from the A. F of L. and if either or both sides decided to invade the other's established territory on a large scale.

These leaders agreed there would be skirmishes, anyway, over already conflicting claims to skilled workers in the mass production industries.

Criticizes Decision.

Pressmen's Home, Tenn., Aug. 6 (AP).—Maj. George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union, today criticized the decision of the American Federation of Labor's executive committee to suspend ten unions unless they withdraw from the Committee for Industrial Organization in 30 days.

He said the conclusion reached in Washington yesterday violated the A. F. of L. constitution.

Maj. Berry is chairman of organized labor's committee working for the re-election of President Roosevelt.

"I regard the action of the executive council as most unfortunate as it relates to unity within the ranks of labor," he said.

"I feel the council has repudiated the policies established by Samuel Gompers when the American Federation of Labor was established.

"The council, under the constitution, has no right to suspend any organization. That is a function of the convention."

Hepburn Wins Acclaim in Her Greatest Film

By Nelson B. Bell.

"MARY OF SCOTLAND," RKO-Radio picturization of the play by Maxwell Anderson, adapted to the screen by Dudley Nichols, costarring Katharine Hepburn and Fredric March, with Florence Eldridge, Douglas Walton, John Carradine, Moroni Olsen, Robert Barrat, Gavin Muir, Ian Keith, Ralph Forbes, Alan Mowbray, Frieda Inescourt, Donald Crisp, David Torrence, Lionel Pape, Monte Blue, Brandon Hurst, Jean Fenwick, Molly Lamont, Anita Colby, Leonard Mudie and Wilfred Lucas. Directed by John Ford. Previewed Saturday afternoon, August 1.

The troubled life of an ill-fated queen, as chronicled by Maxwell Anderson in one of his most profoundly moving plays, has been transferred to the screen without loss of any element of its power, poignance or pitiful futility in the film version of "Mary of Scotland," revealed for the first time in Washington before an enthusiastic capacity audience in RKO-Keith's Theater last night, with Katharine Hepburn in the title role and Fredric March co-starred as Bothwell.

The measured cadence of the Anderson blank-verse speeches, to be sure, has been sacrificed to the greater clarity of Dudley Nichols' simple prose dialogue, but in the visualization of the major incidents in the life of Mary, Queen of Scots, the far-flung web of intrigue, treachery and veiled attack and the murderous outcome of the sinister machinations of Elizabeth Tudor, Queen of England, the picture presents a more complete canvas than the stage play. It is instinct in the flexible nature of the newer medium that it should.

Early Scenes Transposed.

From the introductory sequences of Elizabeth's plotting to prevent Mary Stuart's landing at Leith from the soil of France—a slight deviation, by the way, from the opening of the drama on the boards—through the harried years of Queen Mary's struggle against the avarice and duplicity of the lords of her court, led by her half-brother, Moray, to the final tragic moment when she mounts the stairs to the scaffold, a victim of Elizabeth's fear and cunning, the drama pursues a constantly ascending course of romance, excitement, thrill and suspense.

Four centuries have surrounded Mary of Scotland with an aura of mystery, which Maxwell Anderson has penetrated with no more literary license than customarily is employed by authors of biographical plays dealing with figures remote in history. He has evolved from the welter of conflicting testimony a heroine of romantic charm, poise, authority and youthful impetuosity whom Mr. Nichols has been content to permit to survive without further serious remodeling of character, temperament or deportment.

To this role Miss Hepburn brings an intelligent grasp of its great potentialities. Her performance constitutes perhaps the most impressive demonstration of sustained characterization she ever has brought to the screen. Her opening scenes, as is the case also with Miss Florence Eldridge's, in the role of Elizabeth, are entirely too high pitched and strident, but this fault soon is overcome and forgotten in the succeeding periods of the play. Occasionally, too, the star gives the impression of surrendering momentarily to the temptations that always assail the conscious elocutionist, but in the main her portrayal of a complex and difficult character is so fine that any of these trivial observations becomes mere quibbling.

March a Fiery Bothwell.

In the role of Bothwell, Fredric March presents a vivid study of a high-spirited, courageous and swashbuckling fighting man that colors the whole pattern of the play. The romance between Bothwell and his Queen is rather more strongly stressed in the picture than it was in the original play, but in other respects the vigor of the Anderson work has been appreciably suppressed out of deference to the cinema's anxiety to avoid offense to any sensitive ear. Thus it is that Master John Knox's blistering castigations of his returning Queen have been modified to embrace no more severe epithets than "Jezebel" of France," where once more damning words were hurled. The role of Knox, incidentally, is played with splendid effectiveness by Moroni Olsen.

Ian Keith, as Moray, the conniving half-brother; Alan Mowbray, as Throckmorton, emissary of the frightened Elizabeth; John Carradine, the murdered Rizzio, secretary to Mary Stuart; Ralph Forbes, as Randolph, and Douglas Walton, as Darnley, the weakling husband of the Queen, all contribute character portrayals that weave a worthy background for the compelling impersonations of Miss Hepburn, Mr. March and Florence Eldridge, whose Eliabeth is a well-wrought portrayal that need concede no facet of superiority to the original creation of the role by Helen Menken.

Premiere Attracts Notables.

The skirl of the pipes, the quick transition of scene, the gathering of angry hosts and the pageantry of a picuresque era in English history all are utilized in the camera rendition of "Mary of Scotland" to lend further color, movement and power to a play already great in its thoughtful employment of the worthier commodities of the theater.

Last evening's premiere was attended by a long list of distinguished guests representative of Washington's official, diplomatic, business and social life. Motion pictures of the arriving dignitaries and their guests were made as they passed through the lobby and the gala proceedings were broadcast by Art Brown, of Radio Station WOL, in competition with a group of Highlanders who kept their bagpipes shrilling for the greater part of an hour.

As was inkled in this space many days ago, the season of 1936-37 will open, at the National Theater the Sunday night before Labor Day, which would be September 6, with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film version of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," with Norma Shearer as Juliet, Leslie Howard as Romeo, John Barrymore as Mercutio and Edna May Oliver as the Nurse. And they are also lugging the lumber into the vacant room adjoining the National lobby—where the D. J. Hughes fountain pen hospital used to be—preparatory to fulfilling the other part of the prophecy made here the same day. That would be the installation of a cocktail lounge, remember?

Excited no little over the early opening of what everybody in the know expects to be a banner season—even if his summer theater project didn't jell this year—Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran, of the National once more is one of E street's haunting wraiths overseeing the lumber-lugging and trying to find his way to his new offices back there on the fire escape—or somewhere!

With the new offices so hard to find and that cocktail lounge so easily accessible, it begins to look a little as if the thirsty critics and other habitual first-nighters who used to tag the old Panjandrum around by the coattails will have to buy their own this year. Oh, well, there is always the water wagon!

A neatly typed bulletin from the offices of Master Frank La Falce, head stentor of the local Warner Brothers organization, announces that all of the 1935-36 product being out of the way, the Burbank studios now are busy on the 1936-37 schedule of productions, with 15 of the new season's features under way. Of these, ten are before the cameras and five in preparation for early shooting.

Before the cameras are:

"Sing Me a Love Song," with James Melton, Patricia Ellis, Hugh Hubert and Allen Jenkins.

"God's Country and the Woman," being made in Technicolor with George Brent, Beverley Roberts and Barton MacLane.

"Gold Diggers of 1937," starring Dick Powell and Joan Blondell.

"Mistress of Fashion," with Kay Francis, Ian Hunter and Claude Rains.

And guess what. When all this gelatin is canned, it will be served first in Washington at either the Earle or the Metropolitan. What do you think Master La Falce writes these pieces for, his health?

Black Legion Trial Verdict Due Today

Detroit, Aug. 6 (AP).—A decision tomorrow in the first Black Legion trial—six men charged with kidnaping and flogging—was promised today by Judge Joseph A. Moynihan, who heard testimony without a jury.

The trial ended suddenly after rebuttal witnesses testified and attorneys waived final arguments before the circuit judge as to whether there was proof that the six men abducted Robert Penland, a steel worker, on October 5, 1935, and lashed him in a field for not attending Black Legion meetings.

Defendants in the trial, first since the investigation of Black Legion terrorism began two months ago, are Frederick A. Gulley, who repudiated his previous testimony of a flogging; Wilbur Robinson, self-styled "brigadier general" in the Black Legion; Charles King, former councilman of suburban Ecorse; Thomas F. Cox, Harold Lawrence and Earl Angstadt.

Hezdrel Leads His Men to Battle

In the closing sequences of the Warner Brothers' picturization of Marc Connelly's Pulitzer Prize play, "The Green Pastures," opening today at the Earle Theater, the armies led by the warrior, Hezdrel, are victorious and recover the Ark of the Covenant. In the scene reproduced herewith, Hezdrel rallies his troops to a supreme effort. The role of Hezdrel is played by Rex Ingram, who also appears in the role of De Lawd and as Adam, executing all three assignments with dignity, reverence and skill.

Recasting.

Hollywood, Aug. 6.

The movie fans like to be producers and they continue to tell what they would do with pictures if they were making them. The majority of the letter writers still insist that they would like to see Fred Astaire teamed with Jessie Matthews. So if Pandro Berman, producer of the Astaire flickers, wants to get busy, there's his hint.

JESSIE MATHEWS.

Condace March becomes a producer with these suggestions: "Mary of Scotland"—Joan Crawford as Mary, Queen of Scots, would have given the role the beauty for which history tells us Mary was famed. "Oil for the Lamps of China"—Gary Cooper as the idealistic hero would have supplied the necessary acting ability and would have given his role the romance which was all the picture needed to make it a box office sensation. "The Garden of Allah"—Merle Oberon as Domini, the English heroine, far better for the role than Marlene Dietrich.

As a matter of fact, Producer David Selznick first cast Oberon for that part, but discarded her when he had the chance to get Dietrich.

Jane Leighton believes that Charles Laughton was terribly miscast in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," and gave the wrong interpretation to the role. Basil Rathbone, she insists, would have appeared to better advantage as that mean, narrow and repressed character. She also states that Rathbone might have played the Capt. Bligh role in "Mutiny on the Bounty."

Emily Rossi nominates Robert Taylor for the role, and adds: "He probably did not get the part because he's too good looking. He would have been too much for any Juliet. He puts all the actresses in the shade."

A suggestion for a picture from Florence Westley. She would like to see Tennyson's "Lancelot and Elaine" on the screen, and says: "With Loretta Young as Elaine the fair, Elaine the lovely, Elaine the Lily Maid of Astolot."

Eskimos Are Starving, U. S. Is Told by Trader

Juneau, Alaska, Aug. 6 (AP).—Eskimos along the Arctic rim are facing starvation, said a radio message from Capt. C. D. Peterson, veteran Arctic trader, to the Governor's office from Aerschel Island today. Some of the natives, Peterson messaged, were in a weakened condition and their reindeer are dying. The Barter Island situation is particularly serious.

Peterson said he had given away all he could spare of his supplies. The Governor's office and the Bureau of Indian Affairs radioed United States Commissioner Frank Daugherty, at Barrow, asking if he could send aid. Supplies will be flown there, if necessary.

Boris, Other Royalty Are Feted by Hitler

Included in the party were King Boris of Bulgaria, the Crown Prince of Italy and his sister, Princess Maria; the Crown Prince of Greece and the Crown Prince and Princess of Sweden.

Two sons of Premier Mussolini, Bruno and Vittorio, also were the dictator's guests.

July America Speaks Poll

Landon - 21 States - 272 Electoral Votes - 48.2% of Popular Vote

In the above chart, the shaded States (L) are those which the July AMERICA SPEAKS poll indicated would go to Gov. Landon, were the election held at the time the poll was taken. White States (R) are those which would have been carried by President Roosevelt. In each State, the popular strength of the leading candidate is indicated by the percentage figure.

BUT . . . What Say the Voters TODAY?

THE FIRST Nation-wide Landon-Roosevelt poll . . . taken among the voters of the country, from coast to coast, by AMERICA SPEAKS ballots and interviewers . . . indicated the election of the Kansas Governor by a narrow margin—had the election been held at the time the poll was taken.

BUT THAT was a month ago. What do the voters of the Nation say today? In July, the poll indicated that Gov. Landon would carry enough States to receive a majority of the electoral vote, winning the election. But the majority that gave him this advantage was slim in several States.

HAS THE situation changed during the past month? Has the Landon lead increased . . . decreased?

THE ANSWERS are furnished in the results of the second AMERICA SPEAKS Landon-Roosevelt poll . . . to be published this Sunday, exclusively in Washington, in The Washington Post.

Adagio Artists Are Featured At Shoreham

By Chanticleer.

Bartell and Hurst (there are four of them) are playing the Shoreham Terrace this week in what is practically the first night club engagement in their careers. They've been vaudevillians. J. Gardner Moore, Shoreham's big boss, took one look at their routine and promptly said: They're the finest adagio entertainers I've ever seen. A pretty Japanese dancer, Princess Fumi, with doll in arms, contributes an exotic touch to the floor show. Ida Clarke continues to entertain cocktail guests in the afternoon at the organ.

Ramon advises that he kept a bit of a tab on those who most frequently attend the nightly goings-on at the Powhatan Roof and has decided that the honors are evenly divided between Peggy Gibbins and Patsy Parker. The latter is soon to leave the city and Ramon wanted to make his announcement of the Roof's most faithful before she became ineligible to hold up her end of the duel.

They do say that young Bennett Green is becoming the personality plus item at the Cocoanut Grove. In spite of many beautiful girls, the dancing of Gina and Giano and the personality singing of Mammy Jinny. You can't possibly miss him. He's the singing emmcee.

With my own eyes I witnessed the spectacle of Daredevil Jimmy Bryson taking the jumps at Maryland Club Gardens this week, and so far as I am concerned I'll take my pleasure on the Gardens terrace and he can take the jumps. Jimmy Harris and his orchestra for your daneing.

My ear-to-the-ground department says it might well be worth while to keep an eye on a young Washingtonian named Feldman, who is trying his hand at composing popular ditties. Bill Strickland and his Lotus Orchestra played young Feldman's tune, "Love Canno Reach My Heart," the other night. Very good, too, my spies report. It's a Broadway show on the Lotus floor this week.

Leon Brusiloff and his orchestra are as much a part of the Madrillion as Peter Borras's high standards of food qualities and Spanish atmosphere, by way of a random thought . . . "A Bit of Everything" well describes the offering of Lorraine and Edison at La Paree this week. In addition, Peggy Faye is on hand with acrobatic and modernistic dances; and Edith Dell imitates Charlie Chaplin better than Charlie does himself. Dancing to Al Sakol's music.

The Powhatan Roof's 'Babs'

On the Air Today

The second in the Watergate Sinfonietta series of six programs is to be heard this afternoon at 5:45, WRC. The Sinfonietta was organized by Sidney Hamer for radio broadcasting, but it is quite possible that the unit of 16 musicians will be heard outside the radio studio before the season of Watergate concerts is over.

Conducting today will be Hendrik Essers, with Frank Gittelson, concert master of the Watergate orchestra, as soloist. He will play the Meditation from "Thais."

Another musical highlight for today is the world debut of the newly organized Coolidge String Quartet, an ensemble established under the auspices of the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation of the Library of Congress. Tonight's program is the first of a series over NBC networks, Friday nights, through August 28, WMAL, at 10:30. (In the "Music Guild" periods.)

From San Francisco will be heard the voice of Mrs. Coolidge in a discussion of the new quartet and the world debut. The concert debut has been set for October 30, "Founder's Day" at the Library of Congress.

Comprising the quartet are William Kroll, first violin; Nicolai Berezowsky, second violin; Nicolas Moldavan, viola, and Victor Gottlieb, cellist. Haydn's string quartet in C major is tonight's offering.

Despite the roar of cannon and ping of bullets at the very gates to the city, Madrid's EAQ continues to broadcast traditionally merry Spanish songs by short wave. A night or two ago I asked a friend who is quite a Castilian in his knowledge of foreign languages to listen awhile and tell me what the announcer was saying between songs. And it turned out about as you might have expected. The announcements consisted of the usual explanations of what would be sung next, plus assuring statements to the effect that the rebels were getting nowhere and the government was safe as its neighbor, Gibraltar, etc. Mighty stout hearted, those Spaniards.

Jimmy Braddock—Interviewed by Frank Fay, WMAL, at 7:30. The world champ will be accompanied by Joe Gould, his manager.

"First Nighter" returns to NBC networks, beginning September 4—and will star Don Ameche just as in previous years. Since "First Nighter" left the air last spring, Ameche has completed two pictures. One, an all-color production of "Ramona," with Loretta Young as the feminine star, should go far to make or break the young air actor as future movie material.

Smiling Ed McConnell also returns to the air at the end of this month, but over an NBC net and supported by Palmer Clark's orchestra and chorus and Irma Glen, organist. Ed's growing up, as it were. Ed admits there are better pianists than he, and that he doesn't sing so well. But when it comes to good humor and cherry phillisophy (the ability to talk, in other words) he admits few peers.

This week's prize feature airing: NBC installs its new short-wave equipment in the Washington dog catcher's wagon and demonstrates jointly the virtues of short-wave and how stray dogs are caught. The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office

By Betty Read.

The executive orders on annual and sick leave for government employes have brought such a flood of questions about their interpretation that a special meeting of representatives of the various departments will be necessary to straighten out technical points.

This was revealed by the Civil Service Commission yesterday which declared that at least two dozen letters come to them each week from employes here and in other parts of the country asking for explanations of various phases of the orders.

The commission refers each questioner to the department head in which the employe works but the commissioners said that the fact that they receive so many inquiries about details of the orders clearly shows the confusion in the minds of many.

In consequence, the plan is that after a reasonale time has elapsed—time enough for all the questions to be asked and all the problems of administration to arise—the department representatives will meet to iron out the difficulties and try to get a measure of uniformity in the regulations as administered by each department.

"All departments do not interpret the orders alike," said a spokesman for the commissioners. "They are so complicated that there are many minor points to be ironed out.

"Certain definitions of some of the phrases and phases of the orders are necessary, and we have found that the majority of the questions we have been asked are along this line."

He pointed out that the following paragraph has brought many requests for interpretation and definition:

"In cases of serious disability or ailments, and when the exigencies of the situation so require, sick leave may be advanced not in excess of 30 days in addition to the unusued sick leave that has accumulated to any credit of employes; provided, that such advances shall not be made to any employe more than three times during any one calendar year; that every case of advanced leave shall be supported by the certificate of a registered practicing physician or other practitioner; that the total of such advance shall not exceed at any time 30 days beyond the accumulated sick leave; and that such advances shall be charged against sick leave subsequently accumulating."

The question of what is a serious disability is one to be straightened out, and the other in that section is what constitutes an "other practitioner" mentioned with the registered practicing physician.

It is questions like these that will require a special meeting to determine. At present each department is laying down its own rules, and in many cases the regulations differ widely.

At the time that the annual and sick leave regulations were issued by the Civil Service Commission, the commission requested the departments to keep a record of all overtime work of their employes. This work was begun on July 1 and at present the reports from the first month are beginning to come in to the commissioners.

No tabulation on the reports will be given out by the commission until the record is completed as of December 31, 1936, and it will then be submitted to Congress with the idea of giving that body some definite picture of the situation so that some adjustment, either in time-off or extra pay for additional work, may be made at the next session.

The majority of the reports have not been submitted as yet, but from those that have come in the commission says there is evidence of "some overtime work in several of the departments."

"We will have no definite idea of what the conditions are until all the reports for the month are in," said an official of the commission, "and even then we expect the picture to change from month to month with the pressure of work which will be increased during the fall and early winter."

The office of E. J. Adams, chairman of the special board of investigation at the Federal Trade Commission, is a cross between a hothouse and a flower garden these days for Mr. Adams and all his staff are celebrating his seventieth birthday.

His birthday was yesterday and the staff presented him with bouquets and showered him with congratulations. He has been with the commission about seven years.

The Department of Justice Lodge of the American Federation of Government Employes which has now taken its fight, growing out of the dismissal of lodge members in the fingerprint division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, into the District courts hopes that everything will be settled without litigation.

Yesterday officers of the lodge declared that they have two separate problems on their hands to solve—one, the struggle to have the seven dismissed men reinstated, and the other, the situation with the A. F. G. E., which suspended the lodge for violation of the national constitution. It is this latter phase which they have taken to the courts.

They are seeking to have the A. F. G. E. keep hands off in their negotiations with F. B. I. and justice officials and say they will drop their legal suit if the A. F. G. E. will refrain from acting as if the lodge were suspended and allow them to vote in the Central Labor Union and the district department and permit them to enlist the aid of other lodges in the reinstatement battle.

If not, the lodge will continue to send delegations to F. B. I. Director J. Edgar Hoover and to Homer Cummings, the Attorney General and head of the Department of Justice and, if necessary, attempt to take the matter up with President Roosevelt.

Of the approximately 2,000 employes in the Justice Department, about 60 of them are now in the lodge. There was a membership roll of 108, but the others resigned when the present situation began to manifest itself.

The manager of the Fourth U. S. Civil Service District has announced that he will receive applications until August 13, 1936, for the position of female attendant, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Washington, D. C.

Competitors will be rated on a mental test. They must have reached their 18th but not their 35th birthday on the date of close of receipt of applications. These age limits do not apply to persons granted preference because of military or naval service.

Full information may be obtained from the manager, Fourth U. S. Civil Service District, Seventh and F streets, Washington, D. C.

3 Weddings Hold Interest In District

Garrett-Dodge Marriage In Beirut, Syria, Is Reported.

olbert - Cracraft and Williams - Mero Nuptials Held.

Weddings of interest to Washingtonians are taking place both here and abroad this week. The chapel of American University in Beirut, Syria, was the scene of the marriage Wednesday of Miss Margaret Dodge, daughter of Mr. Bayard Dodge, president of the university there, and Mrs. Dodge, to Mr. Johnson Garrett, of Baltimore.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Garrett, of Baltimore, is a nephew of Mr. John W. Garrett, former Ambassador to Italy, who resides in Baltimore.

Mr. Garrett and his bride will sail tomorrow for the United States, and will make their home in Rockland, Md.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. James Nicol, executive secretary of the American Mission in Syria. The bridesmaids were the Misses Dorothy Seeley, of Canton, N. Y., and Alice Garrett, of Baltimore, a sister to the bridegroom.

Mr. Edward Trudean, of Saranac, N. Y., was best man and the ushers were Mr. Alexander Thomas, of New York, and Mr. Harry Dorman, jr., of Beirut, a cousin of the bride.

The bride, who attended the Holmquist School in New Hope, Pa., was a sophomore at Vassar when she sailed for Syria last May. She made her debut with her cousin, Miss Ruth Rea, at a dinner dance in November on the estate of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland Dodge, in Riverdale, N. Y. She is a grandniece of the late Grace Dodge, distinguished philanthropist.

Mr. Garrett attended the Gilman School in Baltimore and was graduated from Princeton last year. He was a member of the Cap and Gown Club there.

Mero—Williams.

Another wedding of interest to Washington society is that of Miss Sara Talbert Mero, of this city, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John William Mero, of Sanford, Fla., who was married yesterday afternoon in New York City to Mr. Roger Butler Williams, jr., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Roger Butler Williams, of Ithaca, N. Y.

The ceremony was performed at the West End Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Leon Flanders, assistant pastor, who officiated in the absence of the pastor, Dr. A. Edwin Kelgwin.

The bride was gowned in white chiffon, made close fitting to the hips and with puffed sleeves of elbow length. The skirt below the hips was fashioned in tiers of ruffles. Her maline hat had a full brim and she carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Her sister, Mrs. James M. Jackson, of Crescent City, Iowa, was her matron of honor and only attendant, and Mr. Roger Butler Williams 3d, of New York City, son of the bridegroom, was his best man.

After the ceremony, the daughter of the bridegroom. Miss Georgie Cook Williams, entertained at the Ritz-Carlton at a wedding dinner. She returned a few days ago from Europe to be present at the wedding.

Mr. Williams' first wife, who died several years ago, was the former Miss Louise Miller, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Martin Rumpsy Miller, of Tarrytown, N. Y.

The bridal couple left by motor for Wild-a-While, the bridegroom's summer home in the Adirondacks. On their return to New York they will reside on Riverside Drive and Mr. Williams' daughter will reside with them.

The bride, who has practiced law in Washington for a number of years, is a graduate of George Washington University and received her law degree at the National Law School. She is treasurer of the Woman's Bar Asosciation of the District and dean of Omicron Chapter of Kappa Beta Pi, international legal sorority.

Mr. Williams was graduated with a degree in engineering from Cornell University, and is a member of Alpha Delta Phi and Sigma Xi, honorary scientific society.

Only members of the immediate families attended the wedding. They included the parents of the bride, her sister, Mrs. Jackson, and another sister, Mrs. Walter Bach, all of Florida.

Cracraft—Tolbert.

A wedding which took place in Washington yesterday was that of Miss Virginia LaRue Cracraft, daughter of Mrs. William Atkinson Cracraft, of Charleston, S. C., to Mr. Robert Horne Tolbert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Redd Tolbert, of Culpeper, Va. The marriage was at noon in the Church of the Pilgrims, the Rev. Warren H. Stuart, D.D., officiating.

The brother of the bridegroom, Mr. E. L. Tolbert, acted as his best man. The bride who was unattended, wore a costume of aqua blue crepe with accessories of white.

A wedding breakfast for members of the immediate families was served in a private suite at the Shoreham Hotel.

The bride is a graduate of Lasell Junior College at Auburndale, Mass., and a member of the Charleston Junior League. Mr. Tolbert attended Washington and Lee University and is associated with the E. I. DuPont de Nemours in Charleston, where he and his bride will go after a short wedding trip to make their home.

Daileys Leave Today to Sail For Honolulu

Family Visits Mr. and Mrs. A. J. May; Embark at N. Y. Next Week.

Capt. and Mrs. Raymond Dailey and their two daughters, the Misses Eleanor and Ruth Dailey, leave today by motor for New York to sail aboard the Republic, August 14 for Honolulu.

The family has been visiting Mrs. Dailey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. May, in Washington, for several weeks, since leaving Fort Myer, their home for the four years Capt. Dailey has been stationed there.

Honolulu will be the first foreign post in which he has served, and the girls are looking forward to going. They are both enthusiastic swimmers and can hardly wait, they say, to go in the surf on the famous beaches of the Hawaiian Islands. They are also expert young horsewomen and rode regularly when they were at Fort Myer.

One of their regrets is leaving behind "New Deal," their fox terrier whose advent was almost simultaneous with that of the present era. "New Deal," called "Deal" for convenience, has been given to a friend and will remain here while his family goes to Hawaii.

Capt. and Mrs. Dailey and their daughters came to Fort Myer from Governors Island, returning to the vicinity of Mrs. Dailey's birthplace. She is the former Miss Margaret May, one of the few native Washingtonians, and her mother and father claim the same distinction. Both were born in the Capital and have continued to make it their home. Capt. Dailey is a native of New York City.

Both of the girls have been students at Holy Cross Academy and have been entertained by their schoolmates at several informal gatherings.

Mary R. Turner Becomes Bride

Is Wed to J. E. Skiff in Foundry M. E. Church Here.

The Foundry Methodist Church was the scene of the wedding at high noon yesterday of Miss Mary R. Turner, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Louis W. Turner, of Harrisburg, Pa., and Mr. J. Edmund Skiff, of Washington. The ceremony was performed by Dr. J. Louis Hartsock, district superintendent of the New York Methodist Episcopal Conference at Poughkeepsie, who is supplying the pulpit at Foundry Church during August while Dr. F. B. Harris is on vacation.

A wedding breakfast at the Colonial Hotel followed the ceremony.

The bride came to Washington from Harrisburg several years ago and has been employed in the Department of Agriculture. Mr. Skiff, who formerly was of New York City, has been a resident of the Capital a number of years. He was well known as a teacher of voice in New York and his bride was at one time one of his pupils.

To Leave on Cruise.

Mrs. Thorn Valle and her daughter, Miss Joyce Valle, will leave next week for a West Indies cruise. They will go on the Franconia, and will return to their apartment at the Shoreham early in the fall.

Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

Mrs. Arthur MacArthur has left Vancouver, B. C., and is returning to Washington after having been the guest during the Vancouver jubilee of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas MacArthur, 2nd, her son and daughter-in-law. Mrs. Douglas MacArthur was formerly Miss Laura Barkley, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Alben B. Barkley, of Kentucky.

Mrs. MacArthur also has been visiting Maj. Gen. and Mrs. George S. Simonds, recently established at the commandant's house in the Presidio, San Francisco. While in San Francisco she was also a guest for a few days of Mr and Mrs. Alfred Ehrmans. She is sailing today from San Francisco on the Santa Paula for New York and will come to Washington from there.

Speaking of California, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and her daughter, Paulina, are passing a week at Beverly Hills. Next Monday they will leave for San Francisco where they will remain for a few days and then go to Mrs. Albert G. Sims' ranch in Wyoming, where they will remain for some time.

Glowing accounts of the annual fiesta at Santa Barbara, Calif., come from Washingtonians vacationing in that garden spot. Many of them were entertained at the open house maintained by Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mitchell, the latter formerly Miss Lolita Armour, daughter of Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, during the fete. Their home is Montecito.

It will be remembered that Mrs. Mitchell was the noted heiress whose affliction of the hip when a child brought to this country the renowned Dr. Lorenz, of Austria, who cured her and then treated hundreds of other American patients.

Mrs. Mitchell, then Miss Armour, was instrumental in establishing the Third National Service School at Lake Geneva, Wis., to prepare women for their Red Cross work in the World War. She became a colonel on the staff of the school, abiding strictly by the military discipline of up at 6 a. m. and to bed on time and wearing the camp uniform. Another officer in this camp, which was a branch of the nationally known one in Washington, officered and attended by many socialites from this section, was Miss Eleanor Connolly, sister of the late Representative Maurice Connolly, of Iowa, and a banner bearer in the ranks of Democratic women.

Washington's debutantes looking forward to the Baltimore Bachelors' Cotillon as a highlight of their first season, heard with interest yesterday of the additions to the board of directors of that organization of Mr. H. Irving Keyser 2d and Mr. C. Breckinridge Gamble 3d. Both of the new directors have attended many affairs in Washington. The other members of the Baltimore Bachelors are Mr. Tilghman G. Pitts, secretary; Dr. J. Hall Pleasant, Dr. Warren Buckler, Mr. D. Steward Ridgely, Mr. Robert Griswold, Mr. C. Morton Stewart, jr., Mr. James McHenry, Mr. Carlyle Barton and Mr. Alexander Nelson, all of them well known here.

Mrs. Curtis Bok Leaves G. O. P.

Daughter-in-Law of Late Publisher to Make Radio Campaign.

Mrs. Curtis Bok, well-known society leader of Philadelphia, who married the son of the late publisher of that name, has deserted the Republican Party to go over to the Democratic forces. Miss Mary W. Dewson, head of the Democratic women's division, has announced Mrs. Bok will give a series of Nation-wide broadcasts entitled "Happy Days."

Mrs. Bok, who had been a Republican since leaving college in 1922, has traveled extensively, and made a study of educational systems for women in Russia, Turkey and Syria. She also spent some time observing the household of Mahatma Gandhi in India.

Mrs. Bok is the second socially prominent woman in recent weeks to change to the Democratic Party. Mrs. Eva Sanderson Child, former wife of the late Richard Washburn Child, one-time Ambassador to Italy, also announced that she would support Roosevelt. She had previously been a Republican, and had collaborated with her late husband in many political articles attacking Democratic policies.

Dr. Leo Kasehagen 3d And Bride Visit Here

Dr. Leo Kasehagen 3d and his bride, the former Miss Eleanor Duffy, of Pittsburgh, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Kasehagen at their home on Jefferson street. They stopped in Washington en route to Pittsburgh after a tour in the East following their wedding July 8.

Dr. Kasehagen is a member of the faculty of Carnegie Tech in Pittsburgh.

Hepburn Film Opening Draws Capital Society

Wives and Daughters of Diplomats and Officials Attend Premiere.

By Dudley Harmon.

Washington gave an opening last night in the best Hollywood manner with spotlights focused on the arriving guests, a group of Scotch bagpipe players furnishing music at the entrance and news cameras clicking madly. The occasion was the premiere of Katherine Hepburn's latest film, Mary of Scotland, which opened at Keith's theater at 8 o'clock.

Among the first to arrive were the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, the latter wearing a figured print evening gown and a short red quilted taffeta coat. Camera shy, Mrs. Cummings who is seldom photographed, hid her face behind a small Japanese fan. The Diplomatic Corps was well represented in the audience. Countess Roberti, wife of the Secretary of the Italian Embassy, arrived with Count Roberti and the Counselor of the Embassy, the Marquis Alberto Rossi Longhi. She wore a street frock of printed silk, a silver fox fur and a small black cloque with a perky green velvet bow. Other diplomats present were the First Secretary of the Italian Embassy, Signor Bartolomeo Migone; the Second Secretary of the French Embassy, Mr. Claude de Boisanger; the Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy, Mr. H. O. Chalkley; the First Secretary of the Spanish Embassy, Senor Don Luis de Olivares, and the Commercial Attache of the Spanish Embassy, Senor Don Juan Terrasa.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

"Fanciful Problems" and "Trumped Up, Weird Situations," Correspondent Calls Cases Considered Here.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After reading your answers to various problems in The Washington Post over a period of three months I have decided that you are either taken in by a lot of people writing fanciful problems just for the fun of seeing them in print, or that you yourself trump up these weird situations which mostly "do not hold water."

• • • •

Last Monday's problem, telling of a $300 monthly allowance paid to an unmarried mother by her child's father is the most laughable of all. I would bet my last dollar on its being utterly ridiculous: on its never having happened anywhere. Also most amusing was the lengthy discussion you entered into on July 20, telling a 15-year-old girl how to vamp a boy by dancing, playing bridge and so on, instead of making her see how foolish it is for her at her age to be worrying over a kid a little older who for years could have no idea of marrying, could provide no means of support and possibly has no education. Why not tell that child to forget her pulp magazine trash and be a natural, normal girl, if you want to do some real good with your advice?

• • • •

You so much remind me of an old nun in the convent my mother attended, whom the girls all tried to shock with terrible stories of things that never happened, just to see her throw up her hands in horror and tell them never, never to be guilty of such terrible conduct!

• • • •

I do want to compliment you on one thing: the assistance you gave to the man who was desperate to the point of contemplating suicide, as a result of unemployment. Such is fine and worthy of praise and I wish that you could accomplish more along the line of helping the discouraged, uncertain and often very miserable souls drifting alone with no real friends to help them with their vital life-and-death struggle for existence.

AMIGO.

Worth of Credulity.

DEAR AMIGO: It is just possible that I am occasionally taken in by persons writing fanciful problems just for the fun of seeing them in print. But if so, would it make you any happier to know that I am taken in with my eyes more or less open? Has it never occurred to you that one who conducts a department of this type must choose between appearing overly skeptical or overly gullible? For the greatest good of the greatest number, I am content to appear gullible rather than skeptical.

• • • •

In other words, this credulity of mine is not so naive as you may believe. By pursuing the policy of answering in entire good faith such problems as are put to me, I may be dealing with many that seem to you to be nonsensical, farcical or even fabricated, but in considering the chaff I am making doubly sure of considering the wheat. I do not arrogate to myself the quality of omniscience; of knowing which problems and whose are genuine, and which and whose are fake.

• • • •

You laught off the problem of "Twenty Three," who purports to receive a $300 monthly allowance from her child's father; and the problem of "E. M.," 15-year-old girl who wants to know how to get her beau back. But you find the problem of "Mr. Worried," who talked of taking his life because he couldn't find a job, all wool and a yard wide, and entirely deserving of the consideration shown it by me. Would it surprise you to know that some self-appointed critics of my work were just as skeptical of that man's problem as you are sympathetic with it? That they sniffed: "Humph! A man who writes to a newspaper SAYING he is going to commit suicide is the last man in the world who WOULD do such a thing. Get him a job, and you'll have every job hunter in town writing in to you, threatening to commit suicide unless you do the same for them."

Fortunately for "Mr. Worried," whose problem was tragic and real and who now has a job and a new lease on life, this department gave to his appeal the same naive and credulous consideration that it has likewise given the problems of "Twenty Three," "E. M." and countless others.

• • • •

You ask me: "Why not tell that child (E. M.) to forget her pulp magazine trash and be a natural, normal girl, if you want to do some real good with your advice?" Why not make her see "how foolish it is for her at her age to be worrying over a kid a little older who for years could have no idea of marrying . . . ?"

• • • •

Have you forgotten what you were like at 15? What could be more natural and normal for a girl of 15 than to be anguishing in the throes of calf love? And does one ever learn, except from experience, how foolish it is at that particular age to be "worrying over a kid a little older who for years could have no idea of marrying?"

• • • •

Just as there are more ways of killing a cat than choking it with butter, so are there more ways of helping a 15-year-old girl adjust herself to her first heartbreak than pooh-poohing the nonsense of it. I had supposed that all oldsters would grasp the real point back of the advice given "M. E." to keep a stiff upper lip; take a creative interest in her appearance, broaden her social accomplishments and polish her social technique, and strive for reciprocal friendships with other boys. It isn't enough to tell her to act her age; to be a natural and normal girl. One doesn't say to a child: "There's the water. Get in and swim." One first leads him into the water and does one's best by encouraging suggestions to show him the technique of swimming.

Tailored and dashing or sleek and elegant—you may be either in the autumn mode. At left, a trig wool suit in autumn leaf brown checkered with white shows how even suits emphasize the new full-busted silhouette. Note the white accessories with color note repeated in hatband. Designed by Marguerite. Below is a slim, black broadcloth coat with two silver foxes trimming the front and one making the collar. Belt is of self material. The jaunty hat with the quill and veil is very feminine and yet also sophisticated. An ideal outfit for an elegant lady. Designed by Francevramant.

Skirts Shorter for Day, But Evening Gowns Long

Spectator Sports Clothes Streamlined and Tri-Colored; Millinery Marked by Irregular Crowns and Varied Ornaments.

What Washington women will be wearing this fall and winter has been determined in a practical manner by Miss Ethel Ehlen, The Post Fashion Editor. Miss Ehlen, who is in New York attending the fashion openings, has accompanied Washington buyers to the markets and seen what they have actually chosen for their patrons. In the following article, the first of a series on fall styles, she gives the highlights of the season's fashion trends.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

New York, Aug. 6.—A preview of how Mrs. or Miss Washington will look two, three, even six months hence, has been afforded me here in the last week. My daily shopping jaunts to markets with Washington buyers have revealed the following outstanding facts about her fall and winter wardrobe:

First, that if she isn't chic and style—conscious in the 1937 manner it won't be the fault of the buyers. They have selected all that is new and smart in such widely varying modes that no Washington woman need travel far afield for an individual ensemble.

Fall Fashion Highlights.

Black leads the color field.

Skirts are shorter for daytime; longer for evening, full and flared.

The silhouette is a la Mae West above the waistline, a la Katherine Hepburn below.

Second, that styles are varied enough to permit all types of women to appear at their best and to express all phases of their personalities.

This year's mode is very capricious and that is good news for the woman who can't wear "just anything and look like a million dollars." In daytime a woman may go sleek and elegant—if she's that type—in the flared skirts, tunics and unusual hats. Or, she may go youthful and dashing in the gay woolen and velveteen sports type of costumes, with a perky little feather in her vagabond felt hat.

Back Fashion's Favorite.

At night a woman may be daring in an extreme decollete evening dress or she may be mysterious in the half-revealing laces and chiffons or very sophisticated and completely covered in a long-sleeved bar frock.

Now as to how the Washington woman will look when she has laid aside her summer clothes:

Her first fall dress probably will be a black. Black is fashion's favorite and the buyer's first choice in all of the houses belonging to the Fashion Originator's Guild—from the specially designed costumes by famous coutouriers down through a cross-section of the market. The all-black outfit with not a bit of color accent is extremely smart for the woman who can wear it; the black frock, however, may be made more softening and even dramatic by brilliant and subtly-smart accessories.

The Washington woman will find herself wearing a much shorter skirt this fall both for street and afternoon. However, her evening gown will be extremely long. Her skirt will be flared and full and she will most likely wear a tunic in some guise or another, depending on her figure. Some of the tunics are full across the front and extend only over the hips, giving a long line in panel effect to the back of the garment.

The feminine follower of fashion will look well to her fall silhouette. Curves are in—that is above the waistline.

Every woman will need spectator sports clothes, which in modern phraseology means ensembles for general wear. Smart simplicity characterizes the sheer—or "transparent"—as they are now called—woolens. Styles are streamlined with shoulder details and dozens of buttons. Tri-color schemes in jacket or peplum style, such as a gold top, green skirt and brown top-coat (the latter by the way short and boxy) are popular.

Since, according to predictions, it is going to be a suit season, every fall wardrobe should include a sweater and these too have gone "silhouette," fitting the body in slenderizing lines about the waist. The color range is unlimited. The twin sweater has discarded the conventional cardigan top for a short snappy bolero to be worn with woolen or velveteen skirt.

Lyons velvet is again on the scene—both for daytime and evening frocks; it adapts itself beautifully to the "period-effects" so rampant in the style scene. Satin-back crepes often makes use of both sides of the material by way of shiny surface on a dull one, or vice versa. While the dressier type of daytime frock is usually black, formalized woolens in this category, turn also to gray, various tones of blue, green and wine.

"Silly Hats" Back.

Women may as well prepare for the masculine furore their hats are going to cause. For what men call the "silly hat" is back.

The Napoleon influence is noted in a number of hats, also Empire and Directoire inspirations. Fur and fur-trimmed toques with cone-shaped crowns are effective with fur capes or fur-trimmed tunic suits, in the same color as the costume.

Shoes, too, have followed the high-hat scheme and are fashioned high in the front; two materials are also deemed better than one for the majority of daytime shoes, for instance, suede with patent leather.

Washington women who are not-so-slim need not worry about the season's styles. Clothes for this type of woman seem to be one of the chief thoughts of buyers. I repeatedly heard buyers say, "how about the stout woman" and "this would be an excellent model made in larger sizes—youthful in appearance and still in good taste and in step with the mode."

Read tomorrow of how the new accessories may be used to add smartness to your fall costume wardrobe.

Telltale Pronunciation

VERA and the Carters have an entirely wrong idea of each other—all because of pronunciation!

She thinks they're snobs because of their frosty greeting. The Carters think Vera is a little nobody, a misfit in their world.

No wonder. Vera simply murders the language when she speaks. Makes a mess of common words as well as hard ones.

We might any of us slip on "cello," and call "S E L L - o" instead of "C H E L L-o," or pronounce "heinous" as "Hee-nus" instead of "Hay-nus.'

But Vera says "He AST me," not sounding the K in "asked." "COL-um" calls "COL-yum," It's "Um," not "YUM." She says "RO-bust" for "ro-BUST." "lum-MENT-a-ble" instead of "LAM-en-ta-ble," and "alias" as "a-LYE-as" instead of "AY-li-as."

You yourself judge people by their speech. You hear a story on the radio. How do you decide what each character is like? By the speech, of course. Gutteral voice, slurry enunciation, mispronounced words—those instantly mean a negligible, unpolished personality.

Don't place yourself in the "outsider" class by offending with bad pronunciation. Check up on your speech. Our 40-page booklet, Words Most Often Mispronounced, has lined up the tricky words for you. Wipe out one error a day. Make your speech an asset, not a millstone.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Words Most Often Mispronounced, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Punishment Still Problem Of Individual

No Well-Trained Child Should Need Spanking by School Age.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

METHODS of child training and child psychology come and go. Generations of children grow up and produce more generations, and still the question "to spank or not to spank" continues to be discussed.

There are many very sensitive souls who insist that it is brutal, cowardly and humiliating to the child. Others are in favor of spanking early and often. Some have no theories, but act on impulse. Still another group is opposed to it on principle, but very apt to resort to it in practice. There is even a proportion of parents who threaten spankings which they would never dream of giving.

In the end, it is all a question of temperament and of immediate circumstances. There are parents who are quicker with their hands than with their tongues; others who are lazy and unimaginative; a few, who, having a knowledge of child nature, adjust the punishment to the crime and to the individual child. For there are children who thrive best on the short and painful penalty, just as there are others to whom it is actually harmful.

No well-trained child should need a whipping by the time he reaches school age. Never should a whipping be threatened unless the threat is to be fulfilled, and to whip a child and then sentimentalize over him and sympathize with his pain, or apologize for causing it, is a flagrant error.

If a child needs a whipping, and many do, let it be sharp and quick, and over with.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Pressure From Brain.

The skull is a rigid, firm, bony box and there is no room within it for anything but the brain. Whenever a tumor attempts to grow inside the skull symptoms of pressure cannot fail to follow. This generally means pain, vomiting, and interferes with vision as the growth tries to force everything squeezable out of the cranium.

The effect on the eyes is known as choked disc and can be identified by the physician only through the use of the opthalmoscope, which permits a clear vision of the retina and the entrance of the optic nerve.

The headache, although frequent, is not habitual. Nevertheless, it is described as splitting, bursting, or throbbing. It comes periodically and may be so severe as to prove incapacitating. At times the onset is just before rising in the morning, with cessation after breakfast. This situation may continue for several mornings in succession and then disappear for weeks or even months. If a tumor actually exists, however, head pains will return and the intervals of comfort between attacks will become shorter until finally, on waking in the morning, the pain will be agonizing and will persist for the balance of the day. If the pain stops suddenly it may mean that the bones of the skull have separated slightly in order to give room to the growing mass, thereby relieving pressure.

Slow to Develop.

Sometimes convulsions—or what may be considered epileptic seizures—will develop. True epilepsy usually manifests itself in childhood and the occurrence of convulsions in adult life should arouse suspicion that a brain tumor may be present. This is further emphasized should the attacks differ from one another. Some patients will exhibit the first sign by stopping in the midst of a conversation and staring blankly into space for a minute or two.

A fairly common site for brain tumors is in the frontal lobe beneath the bone of the forehead. When these affairs are slow growing there may be at first an impairment of memory for recent events, alternating with periods of elation, of unusual jocularity. The sense of smell is lost entirely. Muscle weakness is noted in the lower portions of the face and perhaps in one arm or leg.

All of the above symptoms may be associated with diseases quite remote from brain tumors. For example, a high degree of arteriosclerosis with narrowed arteries and an insufficient blood supply may be responsible for a condition that simulates very closely a growth in the brain. Sinus infection is often accompanied by intense headaches and the failing vision which ensues may be due to inflammation of the optic nerves from a long contined absorption of pus. Migraine, or the old-fashioned sick headache, does not mean brain tumor, but if coupled with failing vision, the eyes should be examined for signs of pressure. In a child, abnormal enlargement of the head, or the overgrowth of one portion of the skull, should be investigated and the X-ray offers the best evidence.

Prevention Unknown.

Fortunately, surgical progress has been so rapid in the field of brain diseases that early diagnosis is highly desirable.

There is no known method of prevention because these tumors—like Topsy—have "just growed." If they are detected and removed early enough destruction of nervous tissue with resulting paralysis will not take place.

Socialite's Will, Called Forgery, Slights Spouse

Greenwich Village Poet's Lawyer Contests Mrs. Gildea Document.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 6.—Objections to the will of Rosalind Stamford Gildea, former Park avenue society girl who died in May at the age of 30, were filed in Surrogate's Court today by the special guardian for the woman's Greenwich Village poet-husband.

The guardian, Donald T. Mullane, charged that the will was a forgery and asked the surrogate to declare Mrs. Gildea died intestate.

The will, executed in Washington, D. C., August 17, 1935, bequeaths $1 to the husband, John Rose Gildea; $100 to a hospital for the care of cats, and the residue, valued at approximately $15,000, to her mother, Mrs. Agnes Ballantine Stamford, and to Hilton Chisholm, described in the will as "my fiance" and "my common law husband," in equal parts.

The will states that "as the result of a night's indiscretion eight years ago I became the mother of an infant daughter. In order to legalize the birth of my daughter I gave Gildea $25 to go through with a marriage ceremony in the courthouse at Jamaica, Long Island, about two months after the birth of my child.

"I left him on the same day that I married him and in the years which have passed since then I have never lived with him nor have I ever received one penny from him for the support of myself and my child. After the death of my child I sent for Gildea to go with me to the hospital to view the body and the only answer I ever received was a crudely-scrawled note asking for money for gin."

In Mullane's report to the surrogate, Chisholm, said to be in Cincinnati, is accused of having exercised undue influence on the decedent.

Sent to State Hospital.

Gildea has been a Greenwich Village figure for some years and last year was a candidate for the title of "Laureate of Greenwich Village." Previously, he had assumed the title after winning a poetry contest conducted by a Greenwich Village cafeteria.

In 1923, Mrs. Gildea and her mother figured in the news when the furnishings of their luxurious 28-room Park avenue apartment were sold in settlement of the estate of Mrs. Gildea's aunt, Mrs. Ellen Roberts, and mother and daughter remained in the apartment with only a couch to sleep on.

Gov. Hoffman Still Protects Parkers

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 6 (AP).—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, failing to bring New York's case against the alleged kidnapers of Paul H. Wendel into the open at a public hearing, hinted today he still would refuse to extradite Detective Ellis H. Parker and his son, Ellis, jr.

He reserved decision on the extradition request after a brief public hearing in the assembly chamber of the Statehouse, but indicated he was dissatisfied with the evidence produced by the prosecution.

"Certainly nothing has been presented this morning to change my opinion Ellis Parker, sr., should not be extradited," the Governor remarked at one point.

Hoffman previously had refused to surrender the senior Parker, chief of Burlington County detectives.

Suburban Firm Asks Gas Merger

Baltimore, Aug. 6 (AP).—The Washington Gas Light Co. of Montgomery County today asked the public service commission for permission to absorb the Georgetown Gas Light Co. of Montgomery County.

The commission set a public hearing on the request for August 13 at its office here. Both companies are subsidiaries of the Washington Gas Light Co. of Washington, D. C., and both operate in Montgomery County.

The Washington company asked permission to merge and also permission to issue 500 shares of stock with a par value of $20, to be traded for the stock of the Georgetown Co. The Washington company sought authority to issue its own bonds in lieu of Georgetown company securities now outstanding.

2 Washingtonians Hurt In Alexandria Crash

Two Washingtonians were injured slightly in Alexandria late yesterday in an automobile collision at Patrick and Franklin streets.

Nich Macaluso, 54, and Tomasetti Valentino, 39, both of 47 N street northwest, passengers in a car said to have been operated by Harry H. Aerna, of the same address, were cut and bruised. Aerna escaped injury as did Steve Nicholas, of Atlanta, Ga., member of a Gypsy tribe encamped near the Penn Daw Hotel. Nicholas is said to have driven the other car.

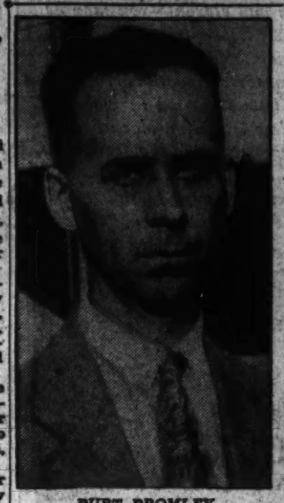
Capital Woman and Son Perish In Burning Auto; 2 Badly Hurt

Husband, I.C.C. Clerk, and Daughter Pulled From Wreckage.



BURT BROMLEY.

Mrs. Henrietta Bromley, 45, and Bertram Bromley, 12, wife and son of Burt M. Bromley, Interstate Commerce Commission clerk and former Mayor of Colmar Manor, Md., died in the flaming wreckage of their automobile yesterday after a crash near Beaver Falls, Pa.

Bromley was in a critical condition in Beaver Valley Hospital, New Brighton, Pa. A daughter, Bonita, 16, suffered undetermined injuries. She freed herself from the wreckage and fell unconscious several yards distant.

The tragedy occurred as the Bromley car and a large truck collided on "Death Curve," near Beaver Falls. The truck is said to have toppled on the light sedan, crushing it.

Firemen played a stream of water on the blazing wreckage and finally managed to extricate Bromley, unconscious and badly burned. Bonita escaped by prying open a door.

The driver of the truck, Mason McCullagh, 32, of Detroit, and his assistant, Alfred Brain, 34, were only slightly injured, it was reported.

The Associated Press reported that William Jackson, a witness, said some boys extricated the girl and then tried to get the little boy out. He was screaming, and the mother was screaming. He added:

"The little boy was pinned under the wreckage. His mother screamed two or three times before the flames killed her. The boys couldn't get to her."

Because of the serious condition of the survivors, the Bromleys were identified only by papers carried in the car. The family had left yesterday on a vacation trip to the West.

Bromley, a native of Minnesota, was elected Mayor of Colmar Manor in 1929 and was the town's second mayor. He was succeeded in 1935 by John N. Torvestadt. Many improvements, including the floating of an $80,000 bond issue for streets, were made during his three terms of office.

He had lived in Colmar Manor for 15 years. During this time he has held a position in Washington as stenographer in the Interstate Commerce Commission. He also had taught in several business colleges in this city. Mrs. Bromley was a native of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Rep. McSwain Dies

When McSwain concluded, the House broke into a pandemonium of applause. Several close friends, knowing of McSwain's heart ailment, escorted him to the cloakroom and forced him to lie down.

In May, 1935, an embarrassing situation arose when "off-the-record" testimony given to McSwain's commitee by two Army officers became public.

The officers were Brig. Gen. Charles E. Kilbourne and Brig. Gen. F. M. Andrews. The transcript of the supposedly secret testimony showed that Gen. Kilbourne favored an indirect arming of the Canadian frontier and that Gen. Andrews discussed the necessity of being able to "seize" French and British islands near American shores.

President Roosevelt, seeking to smooth over what threatened to become an international irritant, addressed a sharp letter of rebuke to Chairman McSwain, and at the same time repudiated the testimony of the officers.

McSwain addressed a reply to the President taking full responsibility for the publication of Army secrets, and promised that thereafter no stenographers would be persent when officers were asked to talk "off the record."

Representative McSwain had long been interested in the airport situation in Washington. He introduced a bill which provided for the closing of Military road and the consequent enlarging of the Washington Airport. He favored the acquisition of that airport as the nucleus of a municipal airport for the city.

McSwain was born at Cross Hill, S. C., May 1, 1875. He was educated in the public schools of Cross Hill and at Wofford College Fitting School and South Carolina College. After being graduated in 1897 cum laude he became a school teacher, studying law on the side. He began practicing law in Greenville, S. C., in 1901.

When the United States entered the World War, McSwain, then 42, entered the officers' training camp at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. He won a commission as captain and in August, 1918, went overseas with the 154th Infantry.

He returned to civil life in March, 1919, and in the following year was elected to the House of Representatives. He was re-elected to every succeeding Congress.

McSwain was one of the first members to advocate the elimination of profiteering during war-time. As far back as 1922, he introduced a resolution calling for the creation of a commission to study the problem. In 1924, the Military Affairs Committee authorized him to conduct an investigation. Through witnesses and documents, he exposed riotous profiteering during the World War. That year both the Republican and Democratic platforms denounced profiteering.

In 1931, Congress adopted the Wainwright-Reed resolution creating the War Policies Commission. Mr. McSwain was appointed a member of this commission.

Mr. McSwain married Sarah McCullough on April 26, 1905. He was a Mason, a member of the Odd Fellows, Junior Order and Knights of Pythias.

Acting Secretary of War Harry Woodring last night praised McSwain for his "very substantial contribution to national defense" and said his death was a "national loss."

Woodring said:

"I have learned with deep regret of the passing of Mr. McSwain. During his long service as chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee he made a very substantial contribution to national defense. As a veteran of the World War and as a student of military affairs, he was thoroughly familiar with the needs of the service. He is largely responsible for the recent legislation so beneficial to the Army and the country. His death is a national loss."

Before he left to visit Army maneuvers at Fort Knox, Ky., Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, said that Representative McSwain's death came as "a great shock" to the officers and enlisted men of the Army.

Mother Wins Triplets, Sought By 2 'Fathers'

By the Associated Press.

West Palm Beach, Fla., Aug. 6.—Shunning the role of Solomon, Judge C. E. Chillingworth today gave into their mother's custody roly-poly boy triplets born out of wedlock with fatherhood claimed by two men.

Ruling it unnecessary for him to determine between rival assertions of paternity, Judge Chillingworth found the welfare of "these innocent children" would be best served by leaving them in the care of twice-wed Mrs. Lois Miller.

Since the young mother last March—five months after birth of the boys—married one of the claimants, 56-year-old T. J. Miller, a barber, the court's ruling was a setback for his rival, Louis D. Pierre, 33, swarthy Miami automobile mechanic.

Pierre raised the question of paternity in a habeas corpus proceeding here to gain custody of Lamar, Marvin and Edgar, given to the mother after the Juvenile Court at Miami looked into the case shortly after their birth here.

Pierre's attorney said today's decision of Judge Chillingworth might be appealed.

The mother, swore Miller, was the father of the triplets, although she admitted to Judge Chillingworth having lived with both men.

The triplets were born last October 2 in a Miami hospital, several months before the mother divorced her first husband, Aubrey Johnson, from whom she was estranged. Pierre claimed he helped finance the divorce.

Judge Chillingworth left a way open for further action, his order stating he was giving Mrs. Miller "temporary custody," but it was indicated he expected the decision to be final.

The babies, identical except that Marvin is a little larger than his brothers, were not brought into court.

Metaxas Denies Dictator Claims

Athens, Aug. 6 (AP).—Premier John Metaxas tonight disclaimed any dictatorial ambitions in his abrogation of constitutional government.

Martial law, dissolution of parliament and the concentration of cabinet authority in a few hands, primarily his own, were urgent steps to combat threats of communism, Greece's "strong man" said, and will be reconsidered after all danger has passed.

"If less exceptional measures were feasible," he continued, "I would have taken them."

There have been no disorders anywhere in the nation, Metaxas said, since the proclamation of the new government. He said no press censorship was contemplated, but "newspapers must be disciplined. The whole nation must be disciplined."

Normal conditions were reported throughout the nation.

(Reports from Salonika said two government war vessels began a clean-up of Communist leaders there under orders to quash any Red movement in the region. Several arrests were made, street meetings were prohibited and a press censorship was invoked.

Fascist Wage Increase.

Rome, Aug. 6 (AP).—The Fascist Conference of Chemical Manufacturies today ordered a 10 per cent wage increase of 40,000 workers. The raises, affecting employes of 850 establishments, was the second large industrial wage increase this month. Previously 500,000 industrial workers were raised 10 per cent in revised contracts which, it was estimated, involved about 20,000 mechanical and metallurgical establishments.

SYNOPSIS.

Eden Faraday, young secretary, opens the door of a taxi and finds a man murdered. She is taken to the police station, where she meets Jack Garnett, newspaper cameraman, and Owen Field, assistant district attorney, who arranges her release. Eden had been mistaken for Gracie Lincoln, a gangman's widow. The man murdered was a notorious gangster, Grappi. Eden's mother, Bridget Faraday, sells gowns and is in love with suave Sidney Creighton. Eden and her spoiled young sister, Robin, and brother, Coburn, depend on their peppery grandmother. Because of rumor that Eden can identify the murderers Owen Field has her guarded. Her mother and Sidney escort them to a business appointment. When they leave her she is snatched by two evil-looking men, but Field and his men rescue her. Field takes her to his mother's home, where she is kept secluded. Jack Garnett climbs roofs to talk to her from her window. Raquel Rosak, an older woman, is trying to force Coburn to marry her.

CHAPTER VIII.

Innocently Involved.

Coburn got up and went out. He had had quite enough. He was in the clear anyway. He had rented the car in Raquel's name. He'd give the keys to the door man and go home. He pulled the ring from his pocket, then drew back into shadow as a long car pulled up under the flamboyant blaze of the entrance.

Something familiar about that car. He knew it. Sidney Creighton's car. Coburn shrank back farther, watching. His mother would be with Creighton, very likely. What did they want to come to a joint like this for? A thrill, of course. Raquel knew his mother. If she dared to pull anything funny—the cheap little tart! He waited.

Creighton got out, walked around to open the other door. Coburn edged away. He could not meet his mother. He had to get Raquel away—gag her, drag her if necessary. He saw a small satin clad foot emerge, a fur coat, familiar—not his mother—he swore softly. This was hell. Robin!

There was, of course, nothing he could do. Robin would jeer and oppose him, with amused sarcasm, if he tried to argue with her. And Creighton would probably tell him to mind his own business. But he could get Raquel out of the dancing crowd. Skillfully he steered her through the press, to the darkness of the little side porch.

His sulky rage had cooled to a calculated suaveness. He knew Raquel. Arguments only stiffened her, quickened suspicion in her mind.

"Why do we have to stick around this dump?" he pleaded boyishly.

Agrees to Leave.

"I'm sick of seeing fat blondes with goo on their eyelashes. I want to look at you. Let's scram."

"But Coburn—there's mother—"

"One more highball and mother will have forgotten that she ever had a child. She'll deny that she ever saw you. And I can't stand watching that Kalaban paw you any longer. Come along, baby—please?"

"My coat—"

"Where's the check? I'll have a boy get it."

"But, my dear, I promised mother——"

"O, forget it. We can come back later if you feel so dutiful."

"You're spoiled, aren't you? she cooed, "Just a big spoiled baby!"

"Sure I'm spoiled. You spoiled me. When I'm with you everything else seems cheap and rotten. Where's the coat check? Here boy——"

He would get her away before the inevitable sickening episode occurred. Twice before he had witnessed it and always it made his gorge rise. Men like Kalaban were always the victims. Raquel was swift and clever. Her own spike heel would be thrust suddenly through the hem of her dress, the man would be tripped and stumble, there would be a ripping sound and after that Raquel crying out that her lovely frock was ruined— O—O—the new dress she had saved and saved to buy! The ending was always the same. A scarlet, embarrassed man hushing and placating, ultimately extracting from a wallet three times the price of the bright little marked down wisp of silk.

Coburn could not endure that disgusting spectacle again. And he could not endure being seen by Creighton and Robin—most of all by Robin.

He got Raquel out to the car finally, without being seen. The tipsy blonde had departed. Raquel snuggled against him.

"You know you promised to take me back," she reminded him. "Not that I want to go—but I'm down to rags and if I don't help mother out with Kalaban she won't do a thing about it. Let's go some place where we can get a decent cup of coffee. That stuff Kalaban had at Monty's was sickening. I know—we'll go to Jarvis' place. They live out here somewhere—it's west of Oak Park—a bungalow. Grace will make coffee for us—and we can scramble up some eggs or something."

"Who's Jarvis?"

"Haven't we been there? O, Jarvis and Grace are nice kids. She's had a sort of tough time of it but now she's married to Jarvis—he's a grand little guy if he doesn't get the big money. Turn west at the Four Mile road and then I'll show you the way. Love me, baby"

"O, sure," grumped Coburn. He would, he was thinking, leave her with this Jarvis outfit and beat it. He would go home and get Eden to help him out of this mess he was in. Eden was a grand girl—she wouldn't preach and nag. Even when he jerred at her loudest, he admired her. And she would understand how a man could get himself all tangled up, innocently. She was just worming out of a snarl herself.

A frightened, unhappy boy, he steered the rackety car capably, thinking what a man of the world he was.

Zellner Pointed Out.

Back in Monty's place Sidney Creighton was saying to Robin Faraday:

Robin's eyes widened as she heard the well known terrible name. She stared at the quiet figure. Just a young man in the thirties whose face twitched a little as he stared at the dancers.

"I'm thrilled," she whispered. "But, heavens, wouldn't mother and Gran have a fit!"

"Undoubtedly," Creighton laughed briefly, "a fit!"

Eden Faraday was at home again.

The Grappi inquest had been a routine matter, important to her only because her testimony, she hoped, freed her at last from menace and fear.

A newspaper had carried her picture, sitting small and demure in the big oak chair, dressed in the plain little brown suit her grandmother had sent, without her furs.

She had not, she testified, seen or known the assailants of Grappi. The press played up her statement, she prayed that the sinister men who had tried to silence her believed it. At any rate Owen Field believed that it was safe for her to go home again.

Stanley McLachlan had been at the inquest. He sat with his eyes upon her, full of concern. And young Jack Garnett had been there, standing against the wall in a stained raincoat, following her with his slow, quizzical smile.

Both these men had meant to take her home. Stanley McLachlan had brought his big car and young Garnett had borrowed a roadster which he had bravely polished and swept out. But Field had given neither of them a chance.

Brisk, brusk and masterful, he had steered her out of the room, giving her only a brief opportunity to speak to the others. His car had waited, a uniformed officer driving, another on guard. He had put her into it with a little flourish, and when she waved cheerfully to the young photographer and her elderly employer, standing in some confusion, Field had frowned, changing the frown to a suave swift smile as he faced her. But Eden had felt the moving of steel behind that smile.

"He likes power," she thought, "and it isn't good for him. It does something to him—something I don't like. It make him look a little like his mother."

Too bad that this was true because he was otherwise so altogether charming. Handsome and easy, with a gallant manner and a confident way that made her feel safe and precious. She liked him, even when she was more than a little afraid of him. Gran liked him, too.

57 Miners Trapped In English Blast

Barnsley, York, England, Aug. 6 (AP).—Fifty-seven miners apparently lost their lives today, entombed by an explosion in a coal pit.

As rescuers battered through wreckage to return bodies to the surface, officials of the Wharncliffe Wood, Moor Co., in whose colliery the subterranean blast occurred, reported 21 bodies recovered. The others were listed as missing.

Force of the explosion hurled many of the men to instant death and others apparently were suffocated by gas.

There was no sign of fire.

One man managed to stagger to the surface, but he died a few hours later.

The others were cut off from any chance to escape by a roof fall.

Hundreds of wives and relatives massed about the pithead tonight, waiting to identify bodies which rescuers carried to the surface.

KEEP COOL . . . the sensible way

OLD SOL bears down when he feels like it—and it doesn't help much to throw off the coat, loosen the collar, fan yourself with your hat. For this summer heat takes something out of you, makes the old legs drag a bit.

Baltimore American does things to you. First, just the look of it makes you feel cooler—the creamy foam, the smiling amber body. Second, its cool, soothing self takes away that parched, wilted feeling. And third, its honest, healthy grain essences put back into your body the very things Old Sol stole from you.

To cool off, to refresh yourself, to invigorate yourself . . . there's nothing these days quite like Baltimore American.

Roberts Asks Company Add 2-Man Cars

Transit Firm Denounces 1892 Act Brought Up at Hearing.

People's Counsel William A. Roberts yesterday suggested the purchase of an adequate number of modern two-man street cars as the Capital Transit Co. insisted that there's no connection between a one-man trolley and a "one-horse" car.

The arguments were contained in briefs filed with the Public Utilities Commission as an aftermath to the public hearing on the transit company's petition for permission to add 40 additional one-man cars, 20 by changing trolleys now two-manned.

Asserting that the problem before the commission "can be epitomized as a struggle between service and revenues," Roberts added:

"The granting of the application in question may, if the estimates of the employes are correct, save the expenditure of some $80,000 per annum. The offsetting losses will be borne by the operators of the one-man cars and by patrons who suffer from delay and other hazards of this type of operation.

Decision Important.

"The commission's decision inevitably will be used to support a continued expansion of one-man car operation, and its decision is therefore most important.

"The evidence submitted does not establish a greater safety or a greater speed claimed for the one-man car, but on the contrary makes it clear that modern equipment with modern safety devices can accomplish much in the way of rejuvenation of transit facilities and in the satisfaction of the clamor for improved service.

"The correct alternative for the granting of this application is an immediate order for the purchase of an adequate number of new two-man cars. The funds for this purchase would be available from the depreciation reserves created by the patrons of the company if integrity of that reserve has been maintained.

"There is still a balance of several million dollars in this reserve in spite of the extensive rehabilitation program. The company has not touched its resulting credit due to the merger and the corresponding benefits of monopoly granted by Congress.

Extensive Concessions.

"It has been granted extensive concessions in relief from paving costs, taxes and the maintenance of traffic policemen. Its financial position has improved materially and is at present superior to any other mass transportation company of record in this proceeding."

The transit company brief, filed by S. R. Bowen and G. Thomas Dunlop, attacked the act of 1892 introduced at the public hearing as a restriction against one-man car operation.

Quoting the language of the act, the company's counsel said:

"The obvious purpose of the act was to prohibit the use of 'one horse' cars * * * Neither in this act, or in any other, was any limitation placed upon the manner of operation of electric cars so far as the conductor and/or motormen were concerned."

Attorneys Sarcastic.

The transit attorneys were sarcastic in their references to testimony offered by citizens. Calling attention to their own evidence in support of the petition, the brief comments:

"Such overwhelming evidence, based upon actual records and competent investigation, is not to be compared in weight with testimony, if such it can be termed, of citizens, however well intentioned, whose opinions are not based upon factual information but upon a prejudice which originated with the general idea that one man cannot competently do the work of two."

Answering the protests of the Central Labor Union against the change, the company pointed out that no immediate dismissals of employes would follow the adoption of the one-man cars.

"The real objection from the point of view of the unions is that the extension of one-man car operations will curtail the field of future additional employment," the brief stated.

Bakery Drivers Strike, Demand Higher Wages

Union Agreement Asked; Employes Replaced, Firm Head Says.

Demanding a union agreement and a $38 minimum weekly wage, drivers employed by Dutch Baker Boy, Inc., struck yesterday. Twenty-six men of a total of 37 engaged in selling the bakery's products participated in the walkout, according to Robert Lester, business agent of the bakery salesmen's local.

Lester and Charles B. McClosky, business agent of the bakers' union, said the strike was called after the employers refused to discuss terms.

Jobs of all the striking drivers were filled immediately by Washington men, William M. Edwards, president of the bakery, announced last night.

"The bakery's deliveries will continue uninterrupted," he said, adding that two years ago, when an effort was made to unionize the drivers, he said he was unable to meet the proposed pay scale without bankrupting his concern.

He offered at that time, he said, to set aside the net profits of the firm into a separate fund, part of which would be distributed in the form of bonuses to the drivers.

Police were detailed to the plant, 807 Monroe street northeast, at 4 a. m. yesterday, when the walkout went into effect, but there was no trouble.

Lester said late yesterday he had received reports of hackers, truck drivers and others being hired to replace the strikers on bakery wagons.

Now paid solely on a commission basis, with no guarantee, most of the drivers earn less than the $38 minimum demanded, Lester declared. The men work as long as 14 hours a day at times, McClosky said they reported to him.

Free Job

Man Who Mowed Lawn Is Seized as Thief.

When a man begins to mow your lawn on his own accord without promise of compensation something is behind the act.

That is the reason J. Walter Stewart, colored bondsmen, told Judge John P. McMahon in Police Court, yesterday he ran a colored man from his lawn at 509 T street northwest and told him to take the mower with him.

He said he had seen the man cutting the grass and when asked why, the man said a doctor told him to do the job. Stewart chased him off. Several days later, Stewart said, his lawn mower turned up missing. He bought another one.

Another evening the same man was mowing Stewart's grass with the new mower. Stewart seized him. The other grass cutter, which the bondsman had ordered the man off with, was found in a pawn shop.

Lawrence Ward admitted he had taken the mower and Judge McMahon committed him to jail for 180 days.

Children Hold Amateur Show Minus Gong, but With Boos

Truesdell Playground Is Visited by 50 Youthful Spectators Who Applaud, Criticize and Allow No Encores.

After making sure that nothing resembling a gong was in sight, children of the Truesdell Playground, Ninth and Ingraham streets northwest, yesterday afternoon put on an amateur show.

But while the bong bong of the gong was missing, every artist had to hide his finer sensibilities as frequent boos came from the audience. The 50 young spectators, however, applauded loudly for the most part, though they saw to it that there were no encores.

And when Cosmos Miller, the mistress of ceremonies, announced with regrets that the show was over since some performers had failed to show up, the playground director, Dahlia Lewis, said unguardedly:

"That's just fine."

Miriam Long, 13, and dressed in a shiny stars and stripes costume, won first prize among the dancers for her neat tapping. Second was Louise Peters, who also gave a monologue.

Shirley Baynard won first place among those speaking pieces with her portrayal of a scene from The Tar Baby. Seven-year-old Raymond Strong placed second in this group.

Twelve-year-old Eileen Long and 11-year-old Mary Claire Maloy received first prize among singing contestants. Dressed in gypsy costumes, they also danced to the jangle of tamborines. Sonny Strong was judged the second best singer.

Others who took part included Marion Husby and Patricia Strong, tap dancers; Dorothy and Lily May Hays, Jane Wineberg and Marjorie Brown, singers; Betty Kirkman and Bernice Jacobs in a blackface skit, and Ora Mardehi, guitar player.

2 Counsel Aids Recommended By Elwood Seal

Mahorner, Simmon to Get Jobs; Board Position Yet to Be Filled.

The District Commissioners today will hand out two minor political plums upon recommendation of Coporation Counsel Elwood Seal as negotiations continue for the making of another political selection to fill the job of counsel for the District Unemployment Compensation Board.

Seal yesterday said he would recommend appointment of two new assistant corporation counsel to fill vacancies. His selections, he said, were made prior to his own appointment, as they were sponsored by persons who backed him.

Matthias Mahorner, son-in-law of Daniel J. Callahan, member of the District Unemployment Compensation Board, will get a $3,800 post. A native of Alabama, he now is engaged in private practice.

Simmon to Get Post.

F. Glenn Simmon, formerly of Oklahoma, will be given a job with an entrance salary of $2,600. He had the backing of Senator Thomas, chairman of the District sub-committee on appropriations. Simmon is employed in the General Accounting Office.

Two aids who have been engaged on a temporary basis, Leo Fee and William J. Hogan, are being dropped, but may be given other jobs in the District.

Fee, a protege of Chairman Mary T. Norton of the House District Committee, has been offered a post as examiner with the District Unemployment Compensation Board, while Hogan is one of several applicants for the post of assistant claims inspector.

Among other candidates for the latter job are the following District employes: George C. Updegraff, Charles T. Webb, Charles A. Beard, jr., Samuel E. Emmons, Victor A. Howard and Alfred A. McGarragty.

Refuse Prediction.

While all officials concerned yesterday declined to predict who may be named as counsel to the Unemployment Compensation Board, there were indications that the appointment would be on the basis of political influence.

Seal yesterday answered veiled rumors that had been afloat regarding his past political record openly with the statement that he had not supported the Democratic Party in 1928.

"Whether or not I bolted the party, I did not vote for former Gov. Smith," he said. "I worked for Hoover. I have never denied it. If I had to do all over again I would do the same. When someone brought that up recently, Senator Glass asked me about it and I told him it was true. It did not stop my appointment as corporation counsel."

Plea to Shift Bus Routing Again Denied

Roberts to Confer With Monroe Citizens on Possible Appeal.

P. U. C. Cites 11 Reasons for Refusing to Make Change in Line.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday again denied the petition of residents of Monroe street for a rerouting of the Rhode Island avenue bus line between Twelfth and Twenty-second streets northeast.

People's Counsel William A. Roberts, who represented the petitioners, said he would not know whether to appeal the ruling to District Supreme Court "until I talk with my clients."

The commission, in its order, cited 11 reasons for its decision and called attention to the confusion among the taxpayers in the community since the rerouting hearing early in July.

"Important Traffic Artery."

While admitting that Monroe street is "an important traffic artery," the commission held that it is "not overburdened," that it is well protected by stop signs, and pointed out that the no-parking ban on the north side would be removed if one route of the bus line were moved to another street.

Bus operation has existed on Monroe street for many years, the order stated, and any change would cause confusion among the patrons and business shops in the area.

The two-way routing "is fairly centrally located with reference to the population of the territory to be served and well located with reference to other transportation lines," the commission stated.

Would Not Lessen Traffic.

Removal of one route of the bus line, the order pointed out, would not substantially lessen traffic on Monroe street, whereas the physical characteristics of the area are such as to require the continuance of the street as an artery.

Regarding the complaints of some Monroe street residents that the bus line depreciates property values, the commission said:

"If the conclusions of certain residents of Monroe street be assumed to be true, that property is adversely affected by continuance of the westbound movement on Monroe street, then this detriment or deterioration would be transferred to another street to the latter's detriment, without any real benefit flowing to the petitioners."

Records Reveal Green Will Ban

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—Further complications developed today in what appeared to be a two-sided conflict for the $80,000,000 estate left by the late Col. Edward H. R. Green, financier, who died at Lake Placid June 8.

A search of probate court records at Bellows Falls, Vt., showed the late Hetty Green, Wall Street wizard and mother of Col. Green, stipulated in passing her husband's estate along to two children that their respective spouses should have no share in it.

Col. Green's widow was appointed temporary administrator of his estate last month by a Kaufman (Tex.) court on the theory that he died without leaving a will.

Three days later, however, the colonel's sister, Mrs. Matthew Astor Wilks, filed a will at Port Henry, N. J., in which she was named sole beneficiary and executor.

The two sisters-in-law remained silent on their conflicting actions pending a hearing Monday on Mrs. Green's Texas appointment.

Ruhland to Confer On Milk Program

Health Officer George C. Ruhland will confer this morning with Mrs. John Boyle, jr., president of the Consumers Council, and other women leaders in civic affairs relative to a "permanent solution" of the local milk problem.

While convinced that the threat of an immediate increase in milk prices has been averted, Mrs. Boyle said that the Consumers Council wants to prevent the price scare from being raised every year.

The council this fall will engage in a community educational campaign to inform citizens of the milk problem preparatory to sponsoring a bill to set up a municipally owned and operated pasteurizing and bottling plant in Washington.

Among others who will accompany Mrs. Boyle at today's parley will be Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the Federation of Women's Clubs, and representatives of the Child Welfare Society.

Old Italian Cheese Sends Man in Cafe To the Hospital

There was nothing wrong with the cheese, however, as it was imported with others of distinguished pedigree from the sunny pastures of Italy, where it was made with loving care and molded by fine Italian hands.

Police learned that Del Fernandez, counter man at the Nobile Cafe, 518 Tenth street northwest, had an altercation with William Johnson, 30, of the 100 block First street northwest, the dishwasher. At the height of the altercation, according to the police, Johnson seized the cheese with anything but loving hands.

He brought it down with a thud on Del Fernandez's head, and then sadly surveyed the fragments of the food which littered the floor.

Physicians at the hospital mended Del Fernandez's head and patched a torn ear—but all the cafe's chefs sadly admitted last night that they never could put the fine old cheese together again.

Scotland Yard's Easy Manner Impresses D. C. Police Captain

Aid of Citizens Is Credited by Capt. Milliken for Excellent Records.

The most remarkable thing about Scotland Yard is the quiet and leisurely way in which it works, Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Women's Bureau, has decided after three weeks of watching London police on the job.

Back in her Washington office yesterday, she said that with the exception of their easy going manner the Scotland Yard investigators were just about as she expected to find them.

"But I'm still wondering how they accomplish so much and make such fine records when they seem to move so slowly," Capt. Milliken said.

She noticed that the London police seldom pick up anyone on suspicion, a custom fairly widespread among officers in this country.

"By the time they arrest a man they usually have plenty of evidence," she explained.

One reason this system works so successfully in England is the readiness of everyone to help the police, she pointed out.

"The average Englishman," she said, "seems to feel pretty responsible for keeping law and order in his country and he'll voluntarily give the officers any information he may have. Over here most people are inclined to keep still. They seem to be afraid of getting themselves involved in the investigation."

Another reason the officers can move slower in London is the difficulty of a person under suspicion leaving England. The country is small and surrounded by water and an officer from the Yard is posted at every sailing point. This makes it comparatively easy to keep track of the movements of any suspicious character.

Aside from two regulations, however, Capt. Milliken thought the Scotland Yard men and women were no better trained than police officers in Washington.

Those two regulations are compulsory review of training and a two-year probation period.

"I think we would do well to have those two things here," said the head of the Women's Bureau. "Maj. Brown is already trying to get the review of training put into effect. I hope later we'll increase our period of probation from one year to two. Since the first year consists mostly of training, it takes another one to prove whether the policeman or policewoman is capable of carrying on the work"

Policewomen have increased greatly in England since the War, Capt. Milliken learned. Many of them now are detailed to parks frequented by children and to commercial amusement places frequented by young people.

Fort Stevens Post To Support O'Connell

Delegates from Fort Stevens Post, No. 32, American Legion, were instructed at a meeting last night to support John H. O'Connell for department commander in the election to be held at the department convention here next week.

But He's D. C. Man Seized on False-Alarm Charge.

The Third Precinct police became irate yesterday when a man arrested on suspicion of pulling a false alary of fire said his name was Leon Trotsky.

Trotzki, who said he lived at 1704 G street northwest, is Polish and said he worked here as a mechanic.

Inquiry Is Opened In Death at Hotel

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, coroner, last night was investigating the death of Wayne Ingram, 36, who was found dead in his room in a downtown hotel late yesterday.

Dr. MacDonald said he learned Ingram had registered at the hotel as a resident of Brooklyn, N. Y., and had no luggage. Investigation showed the man's wife, Mrs. Alice Ingram, lives in the 2100 block of New York avenue northwest. The body was taken to the Morgue pending the investigation.

A certificate of death due to natural causes was issued by Dr. MacDonald in the death of Richard Burdett, of 1305 N street northwest, who was found unconscious in a bathtub early yesterday.

Cut Sought In Maternity Death Rate

D. C. Health Department Will Extend Clinical Activities.

Seven Improvements Ordered in Facilities Here by Ruhland.

Plans for an extension of the maternal welfare clinical activities of the District Health Department were announced yesterday by Health Officer George C. Ruhland.

"For a city the size of Washington, with the added distinction of being the Nation's Capital," a Health Department statement said, "it may be said that the clinical facilities in obstetrics furnished by the Health Department have been inadequate.

"It is expected that the execution of proposed plans for maternal care will produce gratifying results as far as maternal and infant mortality are concerned, as well as increased efficiency of operation of the entire clinic system.

The maternal death rate during the year 1935 for white women was 4.18 per 1,000 live births. For the colored, it was 9.76. In 1930 the maternal mortality for colored reached a peak of 18.35 per 1,000 live births. It is evident that more effort must be directed toward the colored population not only as far as the Health Department is concerned, but particularly toward individuals and institutions rendering obstetric care to colored patients."

Among the seven improvements which have been ordered were the following:

New concise clinic records, a new clinic schedule providing for separate clinics for white and colored women at each station, a contracted pelvis clinic for abnormal cases, a venereal disease clinic at each station and a clinic for roentgenographic pelvimetry and diagnosis at Third and C streets northwest.

Treasury Seeks Plan to Settle McShain Fight

Officials Hope to Reach an Amicable Agreement in Contract Rift.

After a conference yesterday with representatives of John McShain, Inc., Philadelphia contracting firm, which has threatened to withdraw from a $4,657,300 Government building contract, Treasury officials announced a plan was being considered for an amicable settlement of differences.

The contract involved in the dispute is for the construction of an addition to the Bureau of Printing and Engraving and of a new building for the Bureau of Economics. The site for the proposed buildings is the area between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets and C and D streets southwest.

At the time the contract for the work was signed, on June 5, the Government did not own the entire property on which it was proposed to erect the new buildings. A clause in the contract provided that the Government acquire the necessary land and turn it over to the contractors within 60 days.

The McShain company contends that the Government had not made all the land available at the end of the 60-day period and had, therefore, defaulted the contract.

Edward R. Witman, special assistant to Rear Admiral C. H. Peoples, director of the procurement division of the Treasury, said that similar situations had come up before, but had usually been settled satisfactorily. The McShain firm is expected to ask damages for the loss of time he incurred through the failure of the Government to deliver the land.

Cunningham in Hopeless Chase as Lovelock Wins the 1,500

New Zealander Runs Away From U. S. Ace In Stretch at Berlin

Satisfied With Third Position Until Last Turn and Then Streaks to New World Record for Event.

By Paul Gallico.

Berlin, Aug. 6.—Black Jack Lovelock, the New Zealand medical student with the straw colored hair and the wide grin, raced the greatest field of milers ever collected on one track into subjection here today before a crowd of 90,000 people in the great 1,500-meter race. He broke the world's record by a full second in the magnificent time of 3 minutes 47.8 seconds. He took Glenn Cunningham, of Kansas, along with him to world's record time. Glenn finished second in 3.48.4. Luigi Beccali, the Italian Olympic champion of 1932, finished third.

Oh, but that mile was a race! Lovelock never ran so perfectly. They say he had been planning it and dreaming it for two years. And when Cunningham gave him his fight on the backstretch and the last curve, Black Jack lengthened out his stride and just poured down that track. No human being could have caught him. He was victory geared.

Cunningham Struggles.

Cunningham was struggling with all the power in his big body to close the big gap that Lovelock had opened up with his finish drive and Beccali was hot on Glenn's heels, too. But nothing ever seemed as hopeless as chasing Black Jack to that tape. Lovelock was in fourth position on the first lap.

The New Zealander was never worse than fourth. Cunningham took the lead at the second lap with the German Werner Boettcher, challenging him and Lovelock and Beccali moving up to third and fourth places. Archie San Romani was running in the rear as he likes to do and Gene Venzke was lost somewhere in the ruck. He never showed at any time during the race.

At the third lap Eric Ny, of Sweden, made his bid. He moved up ahead of Glenn and still Lovelock was satisfied with that third position until they hit the turn into the backstretch. At this point Lovelock asked the question. His black tights and shirt flashed out in front as he ran around Ny and Cunningham and Ny suddenly vanished as though he had been kidnaped. And then the fun began. Cunningham wanted that race. So did Beccali, the Italian. And San Romani, Cunningham's running mate from Kansas, started his famous dash up from the rear ranks.

Lovelock Opens Up.

The rest of the field was out of it. Only world's record runners were wanted up front. Cunningham was smart enough to stay at Lovelock's heels down the backstretch, because if he ever dropped back he was through. But Lovelock hadn't started yet. He showed Glenn trouble at the start of the last turn by opening up. Around they came, Lovelock leading by five yards, Cunningham pounding after and the Italian laboring to haul them back.

John Cornes, an Englishman, and Phil Edwards, of Canada, were within reach of fourth place, but in the excitement of watching that finish nobody saw the powerful San Romani run around the field. San Romani was within 1.2 seconds of the world's record, but those chaps up front were pioneers. They were exploring fractions of time never before achieved by humans.

Solid as is this stone stadium it shook with the thunder of voices as the great racers came home, Lovelock pullihg away, Cunningham fighting hopelessly, and through that bitter chase whipping the Italian. And San Romani, who will some day be a great miler, finished fourth. Phil Edwards, of Canada, was fifth, and Cornes took the sixth place.

Nazi Police Shadow Writers Is Charge

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 6.—A sensational story saying journalists attending the Olympic games are being shadowed by secret police was published today in the London Daily Herald.

The Berlin correspondent of the paper write: "Every day I see new faces in the press box. Not one of these newcomers makes any attempt to put pencil to paper. The journalists are tongue-tied. When they speak at all, they do so in lowered voices. Every man is under suspicion."

The correspondent alleged the copy he had written had disappeared from the box after he had been questioned about it by a stranger.

ing the superlative marks made under vastly superior weather conditions four years ago at Los Angeles. Thus far Americans have contributed six of the new records, carried off nine first places and spreadeagled their rivals with a total of 153 points. Germany holds down second place with 54¾ points.

After touching off his own world record of 14.1 seconds in the semifinals for the fifth time this year, the only question about the 110-meter hurdle final concerned Towns' ability to capitalize on the perfect conditions and do 14 flat. That apparently is within his grasp any day he really settles down to his hurdling work.

The tension before his crowning test may have had something to do with it, but Towns needed his characteristic finishing rush to offset a slightly shaky start.

Pollard led for the first 80 meters but tripped over the next to last hurdle under pressure and finished a close third as Britain's Finlay crossed the line inches ahead of him as both were clocked in 14.4, equaling the former Olympic mark. Erik Lidman, of Sweden, who had been hailed as a real threat to both Americans, was no match for either and wound up fourth.

The biggest crowd since the opening day got the biggest thrill out of the homebred Stoeck beating the Finns at their own spear-tossing game. The winner's mark of 235 feet 8 13-32 inches was nearly five meters short of Jarvinen's world record of 251 feet 6 inches as well as under the Finnish ace's Olympic mark, but that didn't matter to the throng which acclaimed Germany's third champion in men's field events.

The Teutons have been getting a terrific thrill out of the first triumph ever tasted in Olympic men's track and field competition.

Besides the crowd is rapidly acquiring the whistling habit as manifested in yesterday's twilight closing of Earle Madows victory in the pole vault, while America's stars are competing or being crowned and this hasn't created much international good will.

Alton Terry, Hardin-Simmons University student from Brady, Tex., placed sixth in the javelin throw with a heave of 67.15 meters, 220 feet 3¾ inches. Lee Bartlett, Union City, Mich., three-time Olympian, placed fifteenth with 61.5 meters, 200 feet 7 17-32 inches, while Malcolm Metcalfe, of Los Angeles was fifteenth with 58.20, 190 feet 11 25-64 inches.

Unless Great Britain's speedsters can stop them, Uncle Sam's dusky 400-meter fliers, Jimmy Luvalle, of Los Angeles, and Archie Williams, of Oakland, Calif., are likely to annex the sixth triumph for the American Negro contingent tomorrow.

They came through two trials together with Harold Smallwood, of Ventura, Calif., as a dozen sprinters qualified for the semifinals. Luvalle ran his quarter-final heat in 47.6 seconds—the best time of the trials.

Bill Roberts, of Great Britain, Clicked off a 47.7 heat to lead Smallwood to the tape in the quarter-finals. Williams was not extended in stepping the first trial in 47.8 and then beating Argentina's Juan Carlos Anderson and Canada's Johnny Loaring easily in 48 flat.

The final may be an exclusively Anglo-American affair. Godfrey Rampling and Arthur Godfrey Brown, the latter heralded as the British ace, figure to survive the semifinals, but Roberts, off his present form, appears the man the Americans must beat.

Tajima, the Japanese triple jumper, beat the Olympic record with 15.76, 51 feet 8 35-64 inches, before negotiating the new world record distance of 52 feet, 5 15-16 inches during the final round.

Another son of Nippon, Masao Harada, overhauled Metcalfe while the American, Romero, passed Kenkichi Oshima, the Japanese captain, who had claimed the world mark with 51 feet 10 5-8 inches two years ago.

German Takes Pentathlon Crown

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 6.—Gotthardt Handrick, oberlieutenant in Germany's air force, today won the Olympic pentathlon championship, as the United States captured unofficial team honors in the event for the first time.

Handrick beat out Charles E. Leonard, of St. Petersburg, Fla., for the title. The German's total of 31.5 was low, and Leonard was next with 39.5.

Alfred D. Starbird, of Burlington, Vt., was seventh, with 67.5, and the other American, Lieut. Fred Weber, of West Point, N. Y., was ninth, with 79.

Leonard pulled into the runner-up position today by tying with Starbird for seventh place in the 4,000-meter run. Both improved their position in the final standing in this last event, Leonard moving from third to second and Starbird from ninth to seventh. They ran the race in 14 minutes 15.8 seconds.

Weber also moved up a place in the final standing by finishing in a tie for eighteenth in today's event. His time was 14 minutes 56.2 seconds.

Silvano Abba, of Italy, fifth in the run, finished third in the final standings.

Handrick's consistency won him the title. He did not win a single first place, but took twelfth in the cross-country event, tied for second in the equestrian, was fourth in fencing and shooting and ninth in swimming.

U. S. Swimmers Ready for Games

Berlin, Aug. 6 (AP).—America's Olympic swimmers turned in for rest tonight after the last races for times in training two days before they meet Japan's powerful team to decide world supremacy.

Peter Fick, of the New York A. C., indicated that he is in form and will make a bid to be the No. 1 man of the meet by splashing the 100 meters today in 56.8, which ties his own record for the distance. Training, however, took place in a 25-meter pool.

Of the 400-meter free style, only Jack Medica, of Seattle, Wash., went in for a try. He complained of the exceedingly cold water which does not permit the swimmers to loosen up. Medica finished the 400 in 4.46.

Red Sox Here After Long Absence

Reprieved by rain from the possibilities of a third straight defeat by the Athletics, yesterday, the Nats today open a three-game series with the back-sliding Boston Red Sox.

Absent from Washington since May 10, as a result of the new-fangled schedule, the Red Sox return to the Capital as a distinct also-ran in the pennant race in contrast to the high rating they enjoyed early in the season.

Only slightly better than the Nats' poor record on their last Western trip was the record of the Red Sox, who fell into the second division and barely climbed back again.

Whitehill to Pitch.

Earl Whitehill, who started his last game one week ago when he was battered by the Tigers, will pitch the opening game for the Nats today. A southpaw duel is expected, with Fritz Ostermueller likely to be the Boston pitcher.

Ostermueller has not lost a start to the Nats this season and Manager Joe Cronin has always made it a point to pitch the tall left-hander against the Washington club in each series.

The Nats were on their way to their third straight defeat when rain halted hostilities at the end of the first inning yesterday with the A's in possession of a 4-to-3 lead.

The A's had been making free with the offerings of Buck Newsom. Bob Johnson slashed a triple to deep centerfield that scored two runs, and Higgins, Hayes and Lamar Newsome followed with the third, fourth and fifth hits of the inning that drove in two more.

Linsenbee Halts Rally.

The Nats bounced back to drive Gumpert out of the box with one out in the first, but, after doubles by Chapman and Lewis and singles by Stone and Reynolds, combined with a poor throw by Finney, had accounted for three runs, Horace Lisenbee stopped the rally.

When Lisenbee relieved Gumpert on the mound, Washington fans saw a familiar figure in Griffith Stadium. Lisenbee made his big-league debut with the Nats in 1926 and was a first-year sensation. The next season he was one of five Washington players who figured in the deal that brought Buddy Myer back from Boston.

Forty-eight hours after he announced that Cecil Travis would be given a thorough trial at the short-stop job, Manager Bucky Harris yesterday benched him in favor of Red Kress.

Cards Down Cubs, 3-2, in Eleventh

Dean Bests Lee in Duel for 18th Victory of the Campaign.

Chicago, Aug. 6 (AP).—The gas house gang from St. Louis, with Dizzy Dean in the lead, nosed out the Cubs 3 to 2 today on the strength of Rookie Johnny Mize's homer in the eleventh to take a three-game lead in the National League pennant race.

The Cards came from behind with a two-run splurge in the sixth on Ducky Medwick's double with a pair of mates on base, but the Cubs wiped out their lead in the ninth to force the game into extra innings.

Mound Duel.

Dean hooked up with Bill Lee in a close pitchers' duel for eight innings, and wound up against Charley Root. Although touched for ten hits, the "Great One" was tighter in the pinches than either of his two mound opponents in chalking up his eighteenth victory of the year and giving the gas-house gang their third straight in the current series.

The Cubs counted the first run of the game, pushing a tally across in the opening inning on Billy Herman's double and Frank Demaree's single. Gabby Hartnett batted in the tying run in the ninth with a single, after Stan Hack and Herman had hit safely.

The Cards finally got to Lee in the sixth, when Terry Moore beat out a bunt, Frankie Frisch singled, Pepper Martin forced Moore, and Medwick drove a hard smash along the third-base line to bring both Frisch and Martin home. First up in the eleventh, Mize lined his homer high into the rightfield stands to break up the game.

Rain Washes Out Day's Play in Mid-Atlantic Tennis Tourney

Shore Meets McElvenny In Battle

9 of 16 Survivors Seeking Post Challenge Bowl Are Seeded Stars.

By John R. Vosburgh.

"Rain on the Roof" was the theme song of the Middle Atlantic tennis championships yesterday. The few survivors still in the running for the title and the new Washington Post Challenge Bowl merely sat around at the Edgemoor Club, playing nothing more dangerous than checkers or ping pong.

Even the quick-drying surfaces of the green-colored courts were not able to withstand the downpour and all eight scheduled matches were put over to today. Four fourth-round matches will be held at Columbia Country Club and the remaining ones at Edgemoor.

Of the 16 survivors, 9 are seeded players. There were originally 14 seeded men. Through an early revision of the draw, two highly rated players, Ralph McElvenny and Frank Shore, will collide in the fourth round at 5 p. m. at Columbia. McElvenny is seeded No. 4 and Shore No. 6.

Gilbert Hunt, seeded No. 2 in the Washintgon list, meets 190-pound Herb Shenkin at 4 p. m. at Columbia. Shenkin eliminated Alex Keiles, of Batlimore, fourth seeded out-of-towner, in the first round.

Dooley Mitchell, the Capital's No. 1 seeded man, faces Ray Stocklinski, unseeded, and Edward O. Mather, the elongated Texan, meets Lieut. John K. McCue, of Annapolis. Both matches are at 5 p. m. at Columbia. Mather is seeded No. 7 in the Washington list and McCue, No. 2 in the out-of-town list.

The other seeded players still in the tournament are Hunter Lott, of Philadelphia, and Frank Goeltz, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., who are already in the quarter-finals, and Hubert Simmons, of Harrisburg, Pa., and Bud Markey, the No. 3 Washington man.

Simmons, No. 6 seeded out-of-towner, and for the past two years champion of Harrisburg, encounters the unseeded Lieut. Comdr. D. C. Redgrace, who eliminated Rickey Willis, No. 8 seeded Washingtonian, Wednesday.

Tournament officials expect to hold the quarter-finals tomorrow, the semi-finals Sunday and the finals Monday. Providing Hunter gets past Shenkin, as he is heavily favored to do, he will play Lott tomorrow in what should be one of the fastest matches Washington has seen in many years. Lott, using his terrific service to advantage, eliminated Tony Latona, No. 5 seeded entrant, in the fourth round in straight sets.

The outstanding development yesterday was Hunt's ping-ponging. The 19-year-old former National ranking netman quickly disposed of young DeWitt Smith, generally regarded as one of Edgemoor's better players, 21—14—21—15. Hunt is about a 3-to-2 choice over Mitchell and Lott to win the tournament.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.

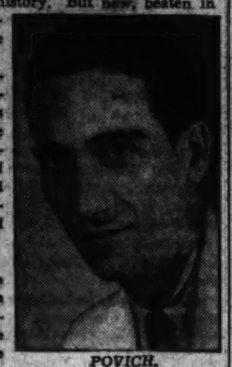
This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Fifteen years ago it was doubted by doctors that Glenn Cunningham would ever walk again, much less run. But with legs that still bore the scars of a fire that crippled him as a child, the Kansan streaked to fame as the greatest miler in America's history. But now, beaten in the Olympic 1,500 meters at Berlin yesterday, Cunningham is entitled to inquire what it takes to win an important race.



POVICH.

When Kansas Glenn sped across the finish line in Berlin's Olympic Stadium yesterday he had broken all existing records for the 1,500 meters, yet he didn't win the race. Because New Zealand's Jack Lovelock had finished one-sixth of a second ahead of him and also broken the world record for the 1,500. Cunningham's record-breaking performance was not good enough.

But that was no new experience to the Kansan. Twice before he had broken records and finished second, because runners for whom he had set his furious pace took advantage of his presence in the race to lower the world marks before Cunningham reached the tape. He could break world records, but he couldn't win races.

It was at Milwaukee two years ago that Cunningham raced to a new world record in the 1,500 meters, but his time was not good enough to beat Princeton's "Bounding Bill" Bonthron, who on that occasion finished a yard ahead of the Kansan to hang up a new record of 3:48.8. Cunningham had the ill luck to meet up with fellows who were breaking world records even at the moment that Glenn was breaking 'em.

A year after that Milwaukee setback, Cunningham encountered another galling defeat, this time by Gene Venzke at Madison Square Garden. In that race, Cunningham raced to a new indoor world record of 3:50.1 for the 1,500 meters, only to lose the race because Pennsylvania's Venzke had just streaked across the finish line in the better time of 3:49.9.

It is paradoxical that though Cunningham cannot seem to win his best races, his presence in the race is necessary to the world record times set by whoever he is running against. Without Cunningham in the race to set a tremendous pace for his rivals and carry them into the finish still pumping at their utmost, the records undoubtedly would not fall, yet Glenn does not win.

But the fact that it is he who pushes his rivals to their new records is probably small solace for a fellow who'd like to get credit for a new world record once in a while. Especially records that he does break.

Running at Suffolk Downs yesterday was a filly by the name of Dixie Princess that undoubtedly can sympathize with Cunningham's plight. Like Cunningham, Dixie Princess is winning fame for its failure to win races.

When Dixie Princess finished second yesterday to Jim John in a sprint race, it was the eighteenth time in 28 starts that the filly had run in the place position. Seven times the horse was beaten by a scanty nose at the wire. Five of those seven nose defeats occurred in consecutive races. If Dixie Princess could talk, she'd undoubtedly have a common topic with Cunningham.

The New York Yankees also can appreciate the misfortunes of Cunningham and Dixie Princess. Five times in the last seven years the Yankees have finished second in the American League pennant race. They have, in fact, been nosed out of the pennant more times than any club in the league. But 1936 finally appears to be bringing success to the Yanks who are out in front winging with nothing likely to stop 'em barring locusts, plague, pestilence or a train wreck.

In Short—

Joe Engel, president of Clark Griffith's Chattanooga club, is in Washington bent on taking Pitcher Syd Cohen back to Chattanooga . . . Cohen is unable to win for the Nats, but he was a big-shot pitcher in the Southern Association, and Engel's favorite . . . two months ago when Griffith inquired of Engel which of his pitchers had the best record, Engle replied: "To hell with the records, Cohen is our best pitcher." . . . Chattanooga's possibilities of finishing in the league playoff will delay the Nats' acquisition of Pitchers Ed Linke and Dick Lanahan and Outfielders Fred Sington and Taft Wright . . . Sington is hitting .386 and Wright is hitting .346 . . . for the first time since he assumed the management of the Browns three years ago, Rogers Hornsby last week was rapped in a St. Louis paper . . . the Browns' attendance for their 52 home games this season totals only 70,000 and their home attendance for the season is not expected to hit 100,000 . . . the Yankees sold 65,000 tickets for one game in New York with Washington this season . . . and out on the Coast, the Seattle club expects to see its season's attendance mount to 300,000 at the present rate.

2 Olympic Boxers, Bewildered, Deny 'Homesick' Ouster Charge

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 6.—Visibly downcast but insistent they were not guilty of breaking rules or victims of homesickness, Joe Church, of Batavia, N. Y., and Howell King, of Detroit, American Olympic team boxers who were dismissed from the squad and sent home, arrived on the S. S. Manhattan today.

"It's all a mystery to us," they stated. "We did no wrong, broke no training rules and were not homesick. As soon as we can, we aim to find out the true cause for sending us home suddenly."

King, a lithe Negro standing six feet, did most of the talking as reporters swarmed about the pair. Church, a short, stocky featherweight with a heavy round face, interjected a word occasionally but for the most part stood silently with a worried look on his face.

"We were good boys on the boat going over and were good boys in Germany," said King, "but one day Freddie Casero, our assistant coach, told us we had to pack up and go home. No one told us why but just that we had to go as soon as possible."

King, as an afterthought, said he believed that the Olympic committee figured there were "too many colored boys on the boxing team" and decided to get rid of him.

"I won the welterweight title fair and square," he said, "but I just guess they were sore 'cause Chester Rutecki, of Chicago, didn't win it. Why, going over on the boat, they made me fight him all over again, explaining it was to be the final test. They gave me a headgear that was so big it fell over my ears but I licked him anyway.

Louis to Fight Al Ettore in September

A fight between Joe Louis and Al Ettore, long in the making, has been definitely arranged for Philadelphia sometime next month, The Post learned last night.

A definite date has not been set, but tentative arrangements call for the bout to be held September 15.

The struggle with the rough, tough young heavyweight who three times has defeated LeRoy Haynes, a colored lad who sought to emulate the Brown Bomber, will mark the second fight in a campaign which Louis' handlers hope will carry their charge back to the fistic heights from which he was toppled by Max Schmeling.

Many "experts" who are conceding Jack Sharkey, Louis' opponent on August 18, in New York, little or no chance against the Detroit Negro, believe Ettore will give Joe the second whipping of his professional career.

The promoters, Taylon and Gunnis, of Philadelphia, believe the contest will gross at least $200,000. Ettore, a Philadelphia lad, is a prime favorite in his own home town, particularly since his latest victory over Haynes, who originally was scheduled to get the chance at Louis.

Ettore is managed by Lew Tendler, one-time great lightweight, who has done much in the way of developing his charge's boxing skill and ringmanship. Al, however, is primarily more a fighter than boxer. He wades in almost continually, firing a continuous barrage from both hands.

The move on the part of Louis' handlers in taking the Ettore bout is an indication that they are not going to pick any soft spots for their boxer in his comeback attempt. Sharkey, a veteran fighter of the same era which produced Max Schmeling, will test Louis' ability against a cagey clouter and against Ettore, Joe will have a chance to demonstrate what he can do against an ambitious, courageous youth.

Chisox Defeat Browns Twice by 9-6 and 4-1

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 6 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox won both games of a double-header with St. Louis here today. The first game, a slugging spree, finished, 9 to 6. The second contest was a pitchers' duel, with the twirling of Elon Hogsett proving inferior to the mound work of Bill Dietrich to make the final result 4 to 1. Dietrich, formerly with the Philadelphia Athletics, went to Chicago via Washington.

By Bill McCormick.

"Haw! Haw!" haw-hawed George Godfrey, for that is the name Feab Smith Williams wears everywhere but on his passport. "Haw Haw! You shouldda seen Senatah Wahld Bill Lyons git goin' when 'at powder exploded undah him."

Big Gawge, it seems was reminiscing about Jack Dempsey's fight with Tommy Gibbons in Shelbys and it seems that he and Dempsey had decided to test the mettle of Senator Wild Willyum, who had been parading about Shelby in cowboy hat, plaid shirt and wild-west boots, boasting of his prowess as an Indian annihilator.

Blew Up Wild Willyum.

The test took the form of a large amount of gunpowder exploded in a tin can under the Senator's seat. It didn't prove much as the Senator insisted he started running not to get away from trouble, but to see where it was—and who needed his help.

Big Gawge, who is here to fight Billy Wells at Griffith Stadium next Tuesday night, still might prove the fistic surprise of the day. He insists he is but 34 and big men such as he mature very late in life. At one time he probably could have beaten any man in the ring—and would have if he hadn't been required to accept defeat at the hands of men he could have stopped with a punch.

"Iffen Ah had Joe Louis' chance. Ah suhtenly wouldda had 'at title," he believes. "Dey ain't nevah taken the handcuffs offen me when Ah couldda done mahself some good."

The erstwhile Black Shadow of Lieperville, one of the best boxers in the business, still insists—as he insisted long before the Schmeling fight—that there are certain fundamental weaknesses in Joe Louis' fighting form.

"He stan' wid his laigs cockeyed," Gawge maintains without a trace of apparent "sour grapes" in his voice. "That makes him a suckah for a right because he cain't git away when he misses. His feet git all tangled up wid each othah."

Big Gawge has made plenty of mooey, and saved quite a bit, but he is land poor.

"Ah was doin' all right along about 1929," he admits, "but when de flump come, away Ah go. Ah got some propuity in Vuhginia an' some in Pennsylvania, an' thass about all."

The big black boy made quite a bit on a recent European tour, where he won recognition of the International Boxing Union as champion of the world by virtue of a 15-round decision over Pierre Charles. He may do all right there again as Promoter Jeff Dickson has just wired him an offer of $25,000 for three bouts abroad.

Wade Star, Tigers Defeat Indians, 9-0

Detroit, Aug. 6 (AP).—Rookie Jake Wade all but pitched the Cleveland Indians out of second place in the American League today, holding them to 7 hits as the Tigers clubbed out a 9 to 0 victory—their third in the 4-game series.

The Tigers fired a 16-hit barrage on Willis Hudlin and George Uhle, featured by Goose Goslin's eighteenth homer and Marvin Owen's eighth, to give Wade his first victory since the Detroits recalled him from the International League.

Hudlin, who gave way to Uhle at the start of a 5-run Tiger spree in the eighth, was charged with the setback.

Detroit did all its scoring in three big innings. In the third, Hal Trosky's error, a walk, and singles by Al Simmons and Owen sent two runs across. In the seventh, Charley Gehringer doubled and paced Goslin home on the latter's 4-bagger.

Meeting Called To Organize Net Body

A definite step toward the further uplift of tennis in Washington will be taken tonight at the Edgemoor Club when representatives from virtually every tennis organization in the Capital area will hold a general mass meeting at 7 o'clock.

Not only is it intended to organize a body to replace the defunct Washington Tennis Association, but to make it much more influential and representative than that group. The new authority is expected to be called the District of Columbia Tennis Association.

Invitations have been sent to every organization in the section primarily devoted to tennis. Maj. C. W. Christenberry is expected to represent Army and Navy Country Club; Larry Phillips, Argyle; Thomas Moorhead, Chevy Chase Club; A. O. White and Owen Howenstein, Columbia; Thomas S. Markey, Edgemoor; Muscoe Garnett, president of the National Capital Parks League; Eleanor Craven, head of the Women's League; Stan McCaskey, of the Departmental League, and Harry March, the junior players of the District.

Leading women players have been invited and it is expected Department of Playgrounds officials will attend. Thomas J. Mangan, president of the Middle Atlantic Association, is heartily in sympathy with the movement and pledges hearty support of the senior organization.

Miley Defeats Berg for Title

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—Marion Miley, tall, brunette daughter of a Lexington, Ky., professional, staged another big finish today to repel a challenge by Minneapolis' Patty Berg and become the first player to win the exacting Western Women's 72-Hole Medal Play Golf Derby two years in a row.

A year ago the Southern star had to come from behind to conquer the red-haired youngster from up North. Today she bore down on the last nine holes, after Miss Berg had pulled up even, shooting a fine 43—39—82, for a final total of 324 strokes, Miss Berg, trailing by a stroke as the final round started, fired a 42 on the outgoing nine to square it, but couldn't withstand a steady stream of pars shot by her rival, and finished with 44—38 and a 72 hole score of 329.

In addition to becoming the first to successfully defend the title in the country's most important medal play event for women, Miss Miley became the second to win the title twice. Virginia Van Wie, former national champion, whipped strong fields in 1931 and 1934.

Miss Berg's wobbly finish almost cost her runner-up honors for the second straight year. Another Minneapolis star, Mrs. H. Austin Pardue, turned in a brilliant 41—40—81

Good Piloting By Garner Factor

By the Associated Press.

Suffolk Downs (Boston), Aug. 6. Mack Garner, veteran rider, entered the winner's circle at Suffolk Downs today aboard Mrs. M. C. Breen's Don Guzman in the mile and a sixteenth of the Lynn Item Purse, feature of a rainy day sport before a crowd of 12,000.

The gelded son of St. James paid $18 for the victory while being timed in 1:48. W. Elliott's Miss Careful was second six lengths in front of C. C. Pendergast's Plucky Baby that was a head in front of Frank A. Carreaud's Mr. Pete.

Miss Careful broke on top with Mr. Pete in close attendance, and although the Elliott mare finally outdistanced that horse, Garner, who got away slowly with Don Guzman, kicked him over the line to victory in the last strides.

Garner has found it extremely difficult to push home a winner although he has been a close second several times.

Maecloud Is Winner.

Race Track, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 6 (AP).—The Maemere Farm silks of Dewitt Page, conspicuously successful in juvenile features this season, again flashed home in front when Maecloud won the nineteenth Schuylerville Stakes by three lengths over the first sloppy track of the meeting here this afternoon.

Charging around the leaders with an undeniable rush, the daughter of High Cloud—Sarah Ginger was powerfully ridden by Eddie Litzenberger to collect $2,725 for her Connecticut owner. J. E. Widener's Magic Circle, with Wayne Wright up, was a laboring second, four lengths better than C. V. Whitney's Peplum. Then came Whichprint, North Riding, Sunset Girl, the heavily backed Broad Ripple and Inactive as named. Maecloud, held at 13 to 5, finished the 5½ furlongs in 1:07 3-5.

CLEAN SPORT was well placed all the way and closed willingly, though no match for the winner. ZEVENAID, away fast, drew clear in the first furlong, though unable to keep pace in the closing three-sixteenths. TEXTER TOTTER, slow to begin, closed some ground though never a threat. JIM JOHN followed in nearest chase of the pace, closed with a rush on the outside, setting up in the conciuding stride. DIXIE PRINCESS took command in the opening three-sixteenths, drew clear and, rated along in front under steadying restraint, held on willingly and just failed to last. VESTED POWER, outrun early, closed going same-ly on the outside. PROSECUTOR displayed good speed early, tiring in the last five-sixteenths. SKY LAD was going willingly on the inside at the end. PADDY'S SISTER, away slowly, moved up stoutly on the inside down backstretch only to weaken in the drive. GAY CREST never was prominent. BALMACAN was outrun.

LADY DAY unseated her rider on the way to the post. She was away fast, drew clear, opened up a good lead and had to be placed under punishment through the last sixteenth to hold BERGERE safe. The latter, away slowly, moved up on the inside leaving the backstretch and closed gamely. GENAIBI was well placed all the way. PAR SCOUT, eased back in the first furlong, was moving up stoutly on the outside, went extremely wide and, losing many length at the stretch turn, never could endanger the leaders. DON GUZMAN, under stout restraint until leaving the backstretch, moved up willingly in the stretch and, coming through on the inside of MISS CAREFUL, was up in the last few strides. MISS CAREFUL displayed speed from the outset, opened up a long lead and, bearing out through the last sixteenth, was unable to stave off the bid of the winner. PLUCKY BABY, restrained early, closed good gap. MR. PETE, well placed, faltered in the last quarter mile. SANDWRACK was never able to reach the leaders. SYNOD was outrun.

The latter wore down B EIGHTY for the lead, opened up a commanding advantage and just failed to last. JUBILEE JIM was away fast, was unable to keep pace although holding a forward position throughout. TONEY BOY made up some ground, though never able to reach the leaders. B EIGHTY stopped after going the first half mile. PAMPERED tired. SOME SCOUT was outrun. PHRIXUS never could gain a prominent position.

Captain Joy,

Out Fishing . . By Jack Hawley

By Jack Hawley.

Our many informants have good reasons to be in excellent humor these days. Fishing—the kind that nets the customers and boatmen satisfactory results—is now ripe for the harvest. One boatman phoned us the blues were on the Middles Grounds between buoys number 14 and 16 and the sea gulls were screaming overhead, diving down for the remnants of live bait which was being left by the "choppers." These blues are smaller than those caught since late May but are all running above four pounds, which, by the way, is some bluefish. However, we can reliably assure anglers there are plenty of the big fellows in these particular waters awaiting your lures. If you have not already made arrangements for your boat, do so at once by phoning J. Frank Raley, Ridge, Md., who will assist you in securing the services of a high-class boatman, pack your lunch, find you overnight accommodations and provide you with any and all kinds of refreshments, liquid or otherwise.

Best to leave the "nips" on shore, because the weather on the Middles can get turbulent enough to make the old-timers hasten shoreward.) The Point Lookout Hotel is also booking reservations for your convenience. This week-end will undoubtedly see the largest crowd of anglers out this season. Trout are running much larger than a week ago (up to five and six pounds), with an average weight of around three pounds; croakers are retaining their plumb weight and delicious food value; bluefish are fat, fighting fools, that win the hearts of every angler engaged in battling him; spot (Norfolk), though small, are very gamey if taken on a fly or light-bait casting rod. An excellent food fish for both humans, bluefish and trout.

Sporting Fish.

Rock fish (striped bass) are tops for sport fishing regardless of size, the little fellows can kick up some trouble on light tackle while the big ones are capable of breaking up the average gear when not properly handled. For the little rock (pan size) use blood worms below the spinner fastened to a small hook and troll slowly for them. For big rock fish troll with No. 3 spoon (Pflueger chum spoon) or, better still, fish on slack tide with tender soft shell crabs fastened to an 8 naught hook, No. 9 line without sinker attached. Let the tide do the work of carrying your bait to the waiting fish.

Rock fish strike, we believe, differently than any fish we have ever tried a lure for, the strike is very gentle, sort of a suction action, never a vigorous declaration of taking it whether you like it or not. Rock fish "mouth" their bait. By this we mean the fish opens his mouth to swallow the whole crab in one big gulp. As it enters his mouth that is the time you feel the line tighten, but don't strike at that moment. Wait until you think he has time to swallow and strike hard, very hard, at that moment. Otherwise the fish will spit the hook from his hard crustacean-like mouth. After you have missed a couple of big ones you will get the knack and make up for lost fish. It is not difficult to learn.

The bonito (cabio) is another fish the anglers will be going for this time in all vengeance. If only one is caught during the day or two days you are out, be thankful you have been rewarded with a fish that many anglers have spent much time and money for without success. There are two good places for these fish to be sought for, Westland and Messick, Va. The latter place has many good boats that go to Buckroe Beach in the vicinity of the York Spit Light (York River) and mix their fishing with bluefish and croakers. Bonito are not as plentiful here as at Westland, where boats are scarce and not of the best type and with very few exceptions are far from having modern conveniences for mixed parties.

Capt. R. T. Selph is the only boatman we know of that has a new modern boat, recently built. He is an excellent example of the type of boatman who can take an old boat, use it a couple of seasons and by hard diligent labor for his trade give them in return a boat that they are mighty proud to fish out of. Without a doubt Mr. Selph is the best "bonito" fisherman in the Chesapeake. Seldom does he fail to boat the fish for the angler if said angler listens to "coaching" from a master at his trade.

Mr. D. Parker of the General Accounting Office can testify to the truth of the above remark and prove it by his 60-pound bonito which he landed after a furious battle of "give and take." He was accompanied by others from his office who were less fortunate but made up for the difference by kicking in with a nice catch of bluefish and big croakers. The thrill in catching a bonito we think is when it is brought close to the boat for the first time, he takes one look at the hull and departs south so quickly and so speedily that one must be on his toes to prevent a snapped rod or line. These fish are caught while chumming and without weighted line.

The First Lady.

Mrs. John W. Harris, of New York City, is the first lady to have the honor of landing the first marlin swordfish at Ocean City, Md. It weighed 60 pounds and measured 5 feet 6 inches. It required 30 minutes to land. She had another on for 15 minutes when a large shark attacked the marlin and the two tugging the line was too much—the lady is going back for more today.

During the last few days every boat at Ocean City has returned with at least one Marlin. Capt. Mattson landed two for his party, but lost a whopper after 1 hour and 35 minutes of tussle. Word comes from A. H. G. Mears, Wachapreague, Va., of a heavy run of flounders weighing from 7 to 11 pounds being caught as fast as is our local hardheads. Mr. D. Holah and Mr. Crove and party of Washington, fishing with Capt. Buck Parker on Monday, landed 300 pounds of the flat fish. Porgies, sea bass and other species are still in the vicinity and are being caught in unlimited numbers, especially the large trout. At this resort we suggest inside fishing for those that do not care for ocean fishing. Solomons Island is one of the popular places looking forward to a big week-end and we suggest early reservations for this place.

Trout and crokers are mixing it up with an occasional blue fish and many pan-size rock fish. Reports from a large number of places on the bay leaves the writer with but one alternative when it comes to suggesting where to go this week-end, viz: There is no particular choice, the map shown below gives all the better fishing grounds and we doubt if any of them would fail us or you at a time like this—plenty of fish every where. Look for the tide table and pick the species you crave which is indicated thereon. Barring inclement weather we should be able to bring back to some of local institutions some fresh fish for the kiddies and elders who are in need of such vitalizing and necessary food from the sea, our pleasure grounds. Don't forget 'em if you have more than you need.

True Fish Story

D. Parker, general accounting office, with 60-pound black bonito (cabio) caught at Westland, Va.; Capt. Richard T. Selph, guide. The record for this fish is 86 pounds.

Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., defending champion, and Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., national indoor champion, were the Easterners to survive. Parker defeated Bobby Riggs, of Los Angeles, 9—7, 8—6; Mangin turned back John McDiarmid, of Texas, last week's Seabright winner, 8—6, 6—3.

In an all-Florida battle Arthur Hendrix eliminated Charles Harris, 4—6, 6—0, 8—6. Eugene Smith, of California, defeated the veteran J. Gilbert Hall, of Orange, N. J., 6—4, 6—4.

Play in the women's singles tournament at the Maidstone Club in Easthampton was postponed because of fog and rain.

Last-Hour Buying of Rails Lifts Stock Market Level

Industrial and Aircraft Shares Join in Advance; Government Issues Show Strength in Bond Trading.

By Frank MacMillen,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Aug. 6.—A late flurry of buying in the rails brightened the stock market today after industrials had pushed irregularly forward for gains of fractions to a point or so. Brokers said that while the financial community was in a buying mood from the start, owing to favorable trade and industrial news, share buyers had combed over the list carefully.

Following an irregularly lower opening Aircrafts showed spirit on the advance. The ability of this group to rally after Wednesday's declines helped put followers of the motors in a buying mood.

The turnabout of these two divisions was accompanied by a run-up in the steels touched off, analysts said, by the spectacle of firming scrap steel prices and evidence of further vitality in heavy industry.

Faith in continued progress of the long-laggard building industry was strengthened by a rise in engineering construction awards. For the week ended August 4, the total advanced to $53,253,000 from $35,598,000 in the like week a year ago, Engineering News-Record, said.

The explanation advanced in brokerage quarters for the last-minute rise in carriers was that evidence of further expansion in the durable goods division pointed to expanding rail revenues on the stretch ahead.

U. S. Steel Higher.

U. S. Steel up 1¾ at 66 and Bethlehem up 1¼ at 55 were leaders of this group. The Aircrafts, to the good fraction to a point or so, were represented by Douglas at 74, Curtiss Wright "a" at 20¼ and Boeing at 30½.

Motors and rails rising fractions to more than a point were Chrysler at 118, General Motors at 68¼, Santa Fe at 84¼, Baltimore & Ohio at 21¾, Illinois Central at 24¼, and New York Central at 41.

The Associated Press average of 60 shares advanced .3 to 68.1. Transactions totaled 1,171,940, compared with 1,284,760 Wednesday.

Carriers turned in a better gain percentage-wise than the industrials. Utilities merely sauntered along a level plateau. A loss of ⅛ to 174 by American Telephone contrasted with an upswing of ¾ to 42⅞ by Consolidated Edison.

The pound sterling closed 3-16 of a cent higher at $5.02. The French franc was down .00¼ of a cent at 6.59 cents.

The day's budget of business and financial news included reports of sharply higher July retail sales, an extra dividend of 25 cents by Texas Corporation, and a sizable gain in Bell System Telephone stations in July, compared with a loss in that month last year.

Industrial Bonds Strong.

Strong rallies in the industrial group paved the way for generally higher prices in the bond market today. Reflecting a slight turn for the better in speculative sentiment as measured by stocks. Low-priced liens fell into step with the upward bound in investment ratings. While profit taking was in evidence in spots, closing prices were around the best of the day.

The Government list turned more active and maintained a stronger undertone under leadership of long term treasuries, several of which ended 2-32 to 7-32 of a point net higher. Indirect obligations were steady.

Best performances in the corporate division were turned in by mortgages of steel companies and other concerns identified with the heavy goods industries. In some cases there were special circumstances associated with the advance. Universal Pipe & Radiator 6s jumped 10 points to 80½, a new 1936 high. The company will soon transfer its assets to a new corporate setup worked out under a reorganization plan. U. S. Pipe & Foundry 3½s at 131 were up 2 points.

New Highs for Year.

Also at new highs for the year were Allis-Chalmer 5s, up 6 points at 159½, on heavy sales, and Youngstown Sheet & Tube 3⅛s up 2¾ at 123¼. Other liens moving up major fractions to more than a point were Walworth 4s, Nickel Plate 4½s, International Paper 5s, Erie 5s, Chesapeake Corporation 5s and American Rolling Mill 4¼s.

Fairing less well, but displaying some liking for higher levels, were Baltimore & Ohio Convertible 4½s, Great Western 4s, North Western 4¾s, Rock Island 4s, International Cement 4s, "Katy" 5s and Studebaker 6s.

Foreign dollar bonds were a trifle mixed principally as a result of backward tendencies in Italians. The Government 7s lost 4 at 78, Rome 6½s dropped 1½ to 75 and Warsaw 7s lost ⅞ at 36½. French Stamped 7s tumbled 10½ points to 177 on a single sale, but the Unstamped 7s gained ⅜ at 160½.

Trading was more active, sales aggregating $11,319,000, par value, against $9,770,000 the day before.

Eastern Fancy Turns To Ten-Gallon Hats

New York, Aug. 6.—Sales of Western or 10-gallon Stetsons have been given an unprecedented boost as the result of the centennial now being held in Texas, according to Charles Kaesshaefer, designer for the John B. Stetson Co.

Although long popular throughout the West, never before have so many tenderfeet adopted the big chapeaux of the range. So great has been the demand in New York that several men's shops have found it necessary for the first time to stock "range bonnets."

Giant Investing Company Announces Changes in Holdings.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 6.—Midyear report of Atlas Corporation, large investment company, issued today, showed net asset value for the common stock equal to $16.01 a share as of June 30 against $15.25 a share at December 31, and $11.08 a share on June 30, 1935.

The corporation announced a dividend of 40 cents on the common stock, duplicating the payment of last February. Commenting on this action, Floyd B. Odlum, president, in a letter to stockholders, said: "In view of further improvement in business conditions and the fact that economic recovery has now proceeded almost uninterruptedly for over two years, your directors have concluded that the time has come to put the common stock on a semi-annual dividend basis." The dividend is payable September 5 to stock of record August 15.

Odlum referred to a "substantial increase" in the proportion of listed securities in the portfolio and a decrease in nonquoted assets, explained in part by the sale in February of two-thirds of the common stock of American Trust Co., San Francisco banking concern.

Some of the railroad and copper investments in the December 31 portfolio did not appear in the latest list, notably the holdings in Pennsylvania Railroad and Phelps Dodge Corporation. The list showed 19,000 of United States Steel common contrasted with none held on December 31.

Gross assets of the corporation and investment company subsidiaries were $165,197,738, against $163,928,678 on December 31. Oil Industry Earnings Best In Seven Years

Consumption Expected to Continue at Record Level.

New York, Aug. 6.—The petroleum industry generally enjoyed the best earnings in the first half of 1936 for any comparable period since 1929 and indications are that this improved level of earning power will be maintained over the rest of the year. Consumption is expected to continue at record high levels, while supplies are apparently being sufficiently well controlled to prevent any drastic break in prices after the end of the present heavy consuming season, according to the Standard Statistics Co., today.

Despite record high production of crude petroleum during the first half of 1936, when the total is estimated to have been about 10 per cent above that for 1935, crude oil stocks on hand July 18, stood at 308,859,000 barrels. This compares with about 314,000,000 barrels at the beginning of the year.

The interstate compact to keep production within limits recommended by the Government is proving effective, with only one major producing State, California — exceeding the advocated allowables. This is chiefly due to the unexpectedly sharp gain in consumption this year. The increase in demand has been running well ahead of the amount of new production sources discovered, while several factors which threatened the maintenance of balanced production earlier in the year have been removed.

Louisiana has enacted a more adequate oil control law which largely eliminates any danger to crude oil prices from the Rodessa Field. The Oklahoma City extension field has also been limited because of water encroachment.

Bank Stocks Reach New High for Year

New York, Aug. 6.—New York City bank stocks extended their gains during July to reach a new 1936 high, Hoit, Rose & Troster report. The close on July 31 was 65.36, for a net gain of 12 per cent in the month and 36 per cent since the year's low of 50.29 on April 30.

Warren Begins Its Anniversary Festival Today

Laura Trout of Front Royal to Be Crowned Queen at Fete Tonight.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., Aug. 6.—Thousands of visitors will be welcomed here beginning tomorrow for the three-day celebration of the Warren County Centennial.

Visitors to the Warren County Centennial today, tomorrow and Sunday will be able to travel on Skyline Drive, starting at Front Royal, Va., H. J. Spelman, of the Bureau of Public Roads, advised the centennial committee yesterday.

The drive will be open from Front Royal as far as Comptons Gap, thus affording motorists going to the centennial some of the most beautiful scenery to be found in the Skyline section.

The Department of National Parks and the United States Bureau of Public Roads has co-operated with the centennial committee in opening the northern end of the Skyline Drive from Front Royal southward, to centennial visitors.

Miss Laura Trout, Front Royal, will be crowned Queen of Warren tomorrow night in a colorful ritual. Lieut. Gov. James H. Price will crown the queen, whose court will include four maids of honor and eight princesses, representing the counties in which the area of Warren County was included before its creation as a separate political unit in 1836, and other adjoining counties. Four princesses will be from Warren County. The coronation will be followed by a pageant at which the queen and her court will be guests of honor. The pageant will have eleven episodes, some symbolic but most of them depicting episodes in the history of this region from the days of the Indians to the present.

Local heroes—historic figures connected with the county's history—will be represented. A man will don the dress of an age long gone and impersonate John Lederer, the first white man who ever traveled the wilderness in the west of Virginia and passed through Manassas Gap.

The Rev. Charles Mynn Thurston, who prayed for America's straggling army in the 1770s, when this country was fighting for freedom and George Washington led the fight, will be impersonated too.

Bishop Francis Asbury, of the early Methodist Church, will be represented, and Chief Justice John Marshall, who rose from the fastnesses of the Blue Ridge Mountains in Warren County to become a powerful figure in American history. He will be impersonated by one of his collateral descendants, Elliott Marshall, Front Royal attorney.

Governor George C. Peery will arrive Saturday to be a guest of the centennial on Sunday morning and will review 4,000 troops of the Virginia National Guard under the command of Brig. Gen. S. Gardner Waller, adjutant general of Virginia, and a native of Front Royal. The troops will bivouac here Saturday night en route to their summer encampment at Indiantown Gap, Pa.

The new Warren County courthouse and the new city hall will be dedicated Friday morning, with Col. James A. Anderson, of Richmond, another native son, as the dedication speaker, and on Saturday morning Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of education, will speak at the dedication of new school buildings in Front Royal and Riverton.

Culbertson On Bridge

I Acquire a Spy.

Dear Ely: I have noted in your column an honest desire to keep abreast of the times, in particular respect to casual contract games throughout the country, on trains, in clubs and in the family parlor. However laudatory it is for you to attempt to kibitz such games so that you will have human interest material for your public you must have a lot of trouble in preserving your incognito, and of course the moment the players know the illustrious Culbertson is in the room they fall victims of stage fright. You could, of course, disguise yourself in wig and flowing beard, but I don't recommend it in this weather. Besides, I have a much better idea.

I will appoint myself your personal spy, without pay, without even glory! As a commuter I am in position to gather bridge material, of both human and inhuman interest, and send it in to you with my own pithy, scintillating comments on bidding and play. All you'll have to do is edit. (What a chance for a pun by you: "I et it, and it was terrible!")

You needn't answer this. Whether you agree or not, I am henceforth

SPY.

P. S. Here is my first contribution. This hand was "played" last week in the smoking car.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	2 no trump	Pass
3 spades	Pass	4 spades	final bid

West opened the three of diamonds, dummy ducked and East won with the king, returning the heart queen. Dummy's ace won and two rounds of trumps were drawn, after which the ace of diamonds was carefully laid down and dummy's last diamond ruffed by declarer! Now, probably with the thought that he was making a throw-in play, declarer led his remaining small heart. The defenders managed to bear up under this attack, winning the heart and returning a third round which declarer disgustedly ruffed. (Is it possible that he hoped for a club lead up to his king?) Two club tricks still had to be conceded to the defenders, so the declarer, with a heavy sigh, acknowledged defeat of one trick.

Incidentally, Ely, this is the caliber of play that is average and you are barking up the wrong tree when you write about Vienna coups and such. Why aim over the heads of the truly "average players?"

I hope my spy-without-portfolio is wrong in his estimate of the average player. Personally, I believe that most players would have made the hand shown above. Obviously, all the declarer had to do, after East's diamond king won the first trick, was to finesse against the diamond queen in order to discard his losing heart. Maybe a sudden toot of the train's whistle distracted the declarer.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Downward tendencies prevailed for most gold bloc currencies in foreign exchange markets yesterday.

The French franc lost .00¼ of a cent in New York at 6.59 cents after the dollar had closed in Paris at the equivalent of 6.589 cents to the franc, against an overnight New York rate of 6.593 cents.

The British pound sterling ran counter to other European units, climbing ¼ of a cent to $5.02¼. In London the dollar was a trifle lower at 5.02⅛ to the pound.

Pesetas continued without benefit of a spot quotation in New York, but bankers worked out an informal agreement calculated to postpone maturity of futures contracts in that currency until ending of the Spanish Bank moratorium makes balances available.

16,000 Killed In Spanish War, Observers Say

Wounded Throughout Nation Placed at 10,000, With Damage Heavy.

By the United Press.

Paris, Aug. 6.—Conservative observers of the Spanish civil war scene today made the following summary of the situation in casualties, victories and armed forces:

Dead in massacres, street fighting, sniping and by order of courts-martial throughout Spain—10,000.

Killed in actual battles, including the shelling of barracks at San Sebastian and Toledo and air raids by both rebels and loyalists on such cities as Zaragoza, Cordoba and Seville—6,000.

Wounded throughout the country—10,000.

Heavy Property Damage.

Property damage throughout Spain—5,000,000,000 pesetas.

Lost national effort due to three weeks' stoppage of work and destruction of roads, mines and factories—2,000,000,000 pesetas.

Estimated men under arms: Rebels—Northern army, 60,000; southern army, 25,000. Loyalists—Barcelona Popular Front militia and loyal troops, 80,000; Loyalists in Madrid area, 50,000; San Sebastian area, 20,000.

As far as real military victories were concerned there have been only five major engagements, as follows:

San Sebastian Victory.

Government forces captured rebel Loyola Barracks at San Sebastian. They defeated three insurgent counter-attacks in the San Sebastian area.

Atlanta Girl Busy Meeting Relatives

"I'm having a wonderful time," said the hazel-eyed girl between calls at the homes of all the aunts and uncles and cousins in town.

Although Mary Louise says she is convinced she is the daughter of the John C. Garners, of Macon, Ga., an agreement was reached between them and the Daniel C. Pittman's, who raised her, for both families to share in her future.

The two families claimed her after a mix-up of babies at an Atlanta hospital in 1919.

"We want Louise to be happy," said the 60-year-old Pittman, Atlanta meat cutter with whom the girl lived as a daughter until she went to visit the Garners last week. "We have worked out an agreement with Mrs. Garner whereby Louise will live with them and come up here and spend week-ends with us whenever she wants to."

Mary Louise motored from Macon last night with Mrs. Garner to see the Pittmans and "straightened things out." They were joined today by Garner, locomotive engineer who laid off his run to come to Atlanta and "see what all the fuss is about and to introduce Mary Louise to the rest of the Garners."

Rioting Reported In Madeira Isles

Lisbon, Portugal, Aug. 6 (Delayed by censor) (AP).—Rioting broke out in the Portuguese-owned Madeira Islands tonight and armed police killed and wounded several persons.

Two warships carrying aircraft and a machine gun and an infantry corps were to leave Portugal immediately for Funchal, capital of the islands, which are about 500 miles southwest of Lisbon in the Atlantic.

The rioting, the government stated, was provoked by a mob protest against an increase in the price of milk and butter as the result of government's recent law protecting dairy farmers.

21 Rail Brotherhoods Indorse Zioncheck

Seattle, Aug. 5 (AP).—A joint legislative committee representing Washington State branches of 21 railway brotherhoods indorsed Representative Marion A. Zioncheck and three other Congressmen today for re-election.

"I still feel that even if all those things they say about me are true, I'm the best man they've had back in Congress from this State," Zioncheck told them in an address after their action.

Chiang's Foes Await Arms.

Hongkong, Aug. 6 (AP).—Smouldering animosities in Kwangsi Province directed against the Nanking Central government gave rise today to reports that recalcitrant war lords were awaiting large arms shipments through Indo-China before reopening an offensive against Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

rebels against the recent firing on a British destroyer and other war activities in the Gibraltar zone, the United Press reported.—Editor's note.]

An article in a Rome newspaper urging recognition of the rebel government also was a factor in spurring draft of the definite program for nonintervention.

The question raised by Italy asking distinction between nonintervention and neutrality will be answered in the French text, officials indicated, by clauses withholding recognition of the rebel government and forbidding private industries to sell war supplies to either force in Spain.

The powers agreed in principle tonight were France, Great Britain, Germany, Russia, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Czechoslovakia. Portugal's attitude was not yet apparent.

Germany had not replied formally, but diplomatic sources said "adhesions or opinions explicitly favorable" were received.

Italy's reply, with reservations, raised the question whether sympathetic expressions in some countries had not already constituted "a clamorous, dangerous form of intervention"—an apparent slap at Leftist France and Communist Russia.

Private Interests.

Italy asked also what effect the neutrality pledge would have on private interests.

Russia imposed two conditions to her acceptance: Portugal must be included, and "certain states" must halt immediately "all assistance given to the rebels."

The latter limitations was seen in French circles as a flat charge of Fascist leanings by Germany and Italy.

The appearance of Italian planes, allegedly carrying arms to rebel troops in Morocco, and a "courtesy call" to rebel headquarters by German naval officers spurred France to propose the non-intervention program.

War Is Feared.

Widespread European war might result, the French predicted, if governments took a hand in the Spanish conflict.

It was feared, French circles said, that Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany might support the rebellion with its self-announced program to set up a military dictatorship and build a huge army in Spain.

Belgium's announcement of adherence was coupled with the statement it will forbid export of arms to both belligerents.

Cadiz Battle

All lights were switched off at 10 p. m. All vehicles were removed from the streets. Proprietors of bars, restaurants and theaters hurriedly notified their patrons the places would be closed for the night.

Increasing use of aerial warfare was ordered by the Loyalist Liberals—bombardment "without mercy." Thirty airplanes were dispatched from Madrid to strengthen air squadrons on the northern seaboard.

Lack Air Armada.

Rebels, too, hoped to battle in the air, but they lacked a formidable air armada. The insurgents notified airplane salesmen they were ready to do business—and a number descended at Gen. Emilio Mola's Burgos headquarters.

Some were reported ready to finance the rebellious movement, in return for contracts and concessions in event of rebel victory.

With the ambassadors of the major European powers absent from Madrid, their embassies repeated requests to all remaining subjects to leave quickly.

The Madrid Telephone Co. offered all American and British women employes full pay during their absence and assured them they would have their jobs back when circumstances permitted them to return to Spain.

ment must insist that provision be made for prompt and full compensation to its owners."

Reports have been current for some time that the Spanish government intended to seize property generally, preliminary to setting up State-controlled and operated industry similar to that of Soviet Russia.

American investments in Spain are estimated to approximate $70,000,000. This Government was faced by a similar problem in 1917, when American property was seized in the course of the Russian Bolshevik revolution. The value of American property seized under the Kerensky regime was estimated at $300,000,000. Claims were filed by the United States, but when the Soviets took control they were repudiated and payment never has been made.

The note to the Spanish Government was delivered by Eric C. Wendelin, Third Secretary of the Embassy and the ranking American diplomatic officer in Madrid.

Wendelin suggested to the Spanish official that certificates be issued to Americans in Madrid to be displayed at their places of business to guard against seizure. He reported the subsecretary declined to give him a formal reply but that he made no suggestion when Wendelin pointed out that surely the Spanish government would not permit unauthorized seizure of American property and nonpayment therefor if requisitioned.

Wendelin said he had supplied certificates to protect American residences and to motorists to protect their automobiles. He said no American property, except some private automobiles, had been seized in Madrid.

The largest American investment in Spain is that of the International Telephone & Telegraph Co., which operates the telephone system in most of that country. The investment is estimated at $48,000,000. So far as officials have been able to learn, no serious damage has been done to this property other than occasional cutting of lines and interruptions in communications.

Wendelin in a separate message said the guard at the American embassy had been increased by the addition of six more policemen, bringing the total to eight. He said he had assurance that the guards would not be withdrawn under any circumstances.

Others Evacuated.

The cruiser Quincy reported it had evacuated from Malaga Thomas Patrick O'Brien, of Newark, and Mr. and Mrs. Roberto Bevan and daughter Elizabeth, of Baltimore.

The folowing Americans were reported safe in Granada and preparing to leave within a few days: Mr. and Mrs. Davidson, New York; Miss Claire Bishop, Detroit; Miss Ethel A. Wheeler, Lansing, Mich.; Theodore Goldsmith, New York; Robert Neville, New York; Miss Elizabeth Carnye, Charles City, Iowa; Miss Rachel Witwer, New York; Mrs. Adah K. Seely, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Mr. and Miss S. M. Weller, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Tolman, Chicago; Miss James Bruce Ross, St. Louis; Miss Leila Cook Barber, Chicago; Claud Hooke, Belvedere, Calif.; David Sholin and family, Toronto, Canada; Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Starke, Philadelphia, and Miss Lydia de Mello, Detroit.

The Madrid Telephone Co. offered all American and British women employes full pay during their absence and assured them they would have their jobs back when circumstances permitted them to return to Spain.

Evacuation Is Urged.

London, Aug. 6 (AP).—The British foreign office broadcast tonight a strong recommendation to British subjects in Spain to avail themselves of facilities for evacuation.

"In view of unsettled conditions in Spain," the radio announcement said, "British subjects are strongly advised to take full advantage of facilities now being provided for their evacuation, as these facilities cannot be held at their disposal indefinitely."

German Action Feared.

Paris (Friday), Aug. 7 (U.P.).—The French press expressed fears today that Germany is preparing to intervene actively in the Spanish civil war as result of the alleged execution of four German citizens.

Commenting on the executions reported by the German official news agency, the newspaper Oeuvre said, "It is hardly necessary to say that thus far the entire European press has not heard of this quadruple shooting."

Oeuvre also reported from Berlin sources that two more German cruisers, making a total of five, accompanied by torpedo boats, have been ordered to Spain.

"International circles at Berlin feel definitely that Germany is preparing for serious intervention in Spanish affairs," Oeuvre said.

Genevieve Tabouis, usually well-informed political writer for Oeuvre, said she has been informed that the French foreign office believes the German battleship Deutschland carried munitions for Gen. Francisco Franco, supreme commander of the Spanish Fascist rebels, and also aided in troop transfers.

The same sources, the writer said, informed her that the German freighter Usaramo, with its name camouflaged, left Hamburg on July 31, carrying 28 bombing planes, munitions, pilots and mechanics.

Ex-Royal Family Threatened.

Paris (Friday), Aug. 7 (U.P.).—Former Queen Victoria of Spain and Juan of Asturias, heir to the nonexistent Spanish throne, were threatened by a Popular Front mob of 100 persons at Menton, the newspaper Le Matin reported today. The prince reportedly complained to the police and left Menton.

Mexicans Ask Protection.

80th Division's Veterans Open Annual Rally

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Aug. 6.—Nearly 1,000 veterans of the Eighth World War Division heard addresses by Gov. Peery, Mayor J. Fulmer Bright and Gen. Adelbert Cronkhite at the opening session of their seventeenth annual reunion today.

Golf, sightseeing and informal parties kept the visitors busy during the afternoon. The grand reunion ball was held tonight. Additional delegations of veterans are expected to register tomorrow, with indications that a new attendance record will be set.

Gov. Peery praised the work of the Eighth Division, shock troops of the American Expeditionary Force, in France, and told of valiant deeds on many fronts.

Mayor Bright termed Richmond the "Verdun of America" and said that "nowhere could veterans be more at home than in Richmond."

Gen. Cronkhite, who commanded the Eightieth at Camp Lee, said he felt like he was coming home to Virginia, not only because he had been stationed at Camp Lee, but also because he went to Fort Monroe 54 years ago as a second lieutenant.

His address was filled with reminiscences. He defied anyone to say that finer soldiers had ever tramped the streets of Richmond than his Camp Lee men.

"My men," he said, "were on their own and I told them so and they acted the part."

Gen. Cronkhite substituted for Henry E. Neumann, Wheeling, W. Va., national commander of Eightieth Division Veterans, who was delayed by a late arriving train. Gen. Kronkhite is honorary commander.

The reunion will continue through Sunday.
